ROYAL VELVET

Fieldcrest Towel Sale

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

The Best Beach In The World Is Ranked #12 By Some Guy Known As "Dr. Beach"

By Dan Rattiner

The new beach rankings have come out. Dr. Steven Leatherman of Florida International University, who makes a study of this country's beaches, has this year ranked East Hampton Main Beach at #12, with Westhampton Beach right behind at #13. This is the first time, since Dr. Leatherman started publishing his rankings annually three years ago, that East Hampton has not moved up. In 1997, East Hampton was ranked #15. In 1998, East Hampton was ranked #13. And last year, East Hampton was ranked at the same #12 that it was this year.

The whole thing puts me in mind of The New York Times Best Seller Rankings. Or the top 50 Rock and Roll hits. How they go up and down is understandable. They measure the number of books or CDs that people buy each week.

But beaches? I don't know. More is less, I would think. If everybody comes and jams the place with wall to wall people, the ranking would decline. Then it would fall off the bottom of Mr. Leatherman's top 20 chart, and people would read about that and stop going there and then the beach would rise up the list again.

On the other hand, Dr. Leatherman, who is known as "Dr. Beach" by those who have spent time around his magnificent obsession, is a trained environmentalist. A storm would come and wipe all the sand off the beach and out to sea and its ranking would go down. Or they'd find nesting piping plovers on the beach during

JERRY SEINFELD, OR SEINFIELD'S, SECOND DAY IN THE HAMPTONS

By Dan Rattiner

There was a big antique and classic car show in Bridgehampton last weekend on the fairgrounds adjacent to the Hampton Classic Horse Show grounds. A big banner was slung across the Montauk Highway inviting people there and there was an auction of some of the cars and a luncheon at which trophies were given out to the best cars in the show.

Among the presenters were Jerry Seinfeld, who moved out here yesterday, having bought Billy Joel's house for $40,000,000. Seinfeld would be giving out a trophy for the best car in the show and also a special award from himself personally. Another award would be given out by Dan Rattiner, the noted local publisher, who bought a house formerly owned by a bayman named Robert Ball on Three Mile Harbor Road in East Hampton twenty-five years ago for $34,000.

Since I am Dan Rattiner, it occurred to me that I would be standing on the dais at the front end of the luncheon tent along with Mr. Seinfeld and so I might get a chance to meet him and try to answer the question that everyone is asking everyone out here, which is, What is he really like?

Driving to the event, called Concours D'Elegance, with proceeds to benefit the American Cancer Society, Cathie and I argued about prejudice, ego, bigotry, money, local people versus summer people, show business, paparazzi, the appalling impact of thousands of autograph seekers, celebrities and the great unwashed. In other words, the usual.

I reminded Cathie of the time that I made inquiries about joining a local golf course and was told by a member not to bother because I was Jewish. She reminded me that her family went back to colonial times and from her perspective, I was the newcomer.

the chick hatching season, which is the first half of the summer, nobody would be allowed on the beach and the rankings would go up. I think.

Anyway, East Hampton seems to have peaked. Westhampton Beach, on the other hand, has continued to go up. It was #18 last year. It is breathing down the neck of East Hampton.

Of course, you might ask, who exactly is it that is #1 through #11? Ten of the eleven beaches chosen by "Dr. Beach" are from either Hawaii or Florida. One of them, #10, is Okracoke Island, North Carolina.

How does Dr. Beach decide this? And what happened to #12, #13 and #14 from two years ago? Shark attacks? A plague of those Portuguese Men 'o War that come up on the beach and sting?

Personally, I have been to a lot of beaches in the world, including trips to every one of the habitable Hawaiian islands, (Maui four times), most of Florida and even Okracoke, North Carolina, and the truth is I have never been on a beach that could compare to the one we have here in the Hamptons. It is not just East Hampton and Westhampton Beach. Our beach extends for sixty miles, from downtown Montauk and the cliffs to the east, through Amagansett, East Hampton and Southampton, all the way to Fire Island beyond Remsenberg.

It is, in some places, 200 yards across from the water to the dunes, an extraordinary distance, and except for small stretches, is a fabulous mix of soft sand, dunes, big surf, seagulls, driftwood, mist and salt sea air. It just doesn't get any better than this, in my opinion.

#12 and #13? Indeed.

"Hi, Dr. Leatherman? This is Ronald Biederman, the marketing director of Hawaii-Taki Tours and we'd like to invite you and your wife to an all expense paid vacation here at our Mona Kauai beach for a week or a month or whatever. You'll have a wonderful time. And you know how we were #18 last year? We want to show you how we ought to be a good bit up that list. Liquor? A beachfront suite? Nightly entertainment? It's all on us. Be our guest."

Nah. Dr. Leatherman, I suppose, is incorruptible. On the other hand, wasn't that the beach at Hoboken, New Jersey on the list briefly two years ago? Or did I get that mixed up with something else? •

Sharks, sea lions and the Lost City of Atlantis? That's right! On June 15, 2000, Atlantis Marine World on Main Street in Riverhead will be alive with more than 80 exciting exhibits, including a 120,000-gallon shark exhibit and the largest live coral reef display in North America.

Be greeted by frolicking seals. Touch and feed the creatures in Ray Bay. And while you're visiting, be sure to take a cruise on the Atlantis Explorer, Long Island's Environmental Tour Boat Adventure.

Open 7 days a week, 9 am to 8 pm, Wednesday 9 am to 6 pm. (631) 208-9200.

The Future Of Parking

I Have Seen The Future, As Pogo Used To Say, And It Is Us In The Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

It's no secret. One of the most troubling problems in the downtowns of East, South and Westhampton Beach is parking. In each of these towns, there is parking for about 500 cars in the lots behind the stores. There are usually about 1500 cars trying to park there. Who you know does not help.

Where it all goes from here seems, by the other towns, to have been turned over to the Village of East Hampton. Three years ago, they introduced a free shuttle bus that went back and forth all day between town and a vast parking field about half a mile away. Not many people used it. But now they've got a bigger and more striking looking shuttle bus, and they are offering free gifts to people who use it this year. We shall see.

Then, this past weekend, the Village of East Hampton inaugurated another idea. They activated these automated parking ticket dispensers at the two entrances to the biggest of the downtown parking lots. The tickets are free. And they entitle you to two hours of parking. Keep them on your dashboard. Cars without parking tickets get parking tickets. The kind you pay.

Nine a.m. Friday morning came and the dispensers were turned on. What a mess. Traffic backed up right out into Main Street, creating a monster traffic jam all up and down the street as shoppers confronted these things in the lots for the first time.

These weren't here before?

They want us to take them free?

If they're free why do they want us to do that?

Is this a trick?

It seemed like a good idea at the time when the Village fathers voted last fall to have these dispensers in place by Memorial Day 2000. If you count the stores in downtown you get about 100. Almost all the store owners belong to the Chamber of Commerce. At the Chamber of Commerce meeting last fall it was explained that these dispensers would get the merchants to do what they had not been able to do voluntarily. Have them and their help park in the lot far away and take the shuttle bus in.

Think about it. Say you have five people working in a store. Each has a car. There are 100 stores so there are 500 cars that get driven into town every morning and parked in the downtown parking lots. And that fills half the lot. But who could stop them? This was America. Officialdom would have to get these merchants to not park there voluntarily.

Meeting after meeting was held at which it was explained to the merchants that if they don't park their 500 cars in the lots in back then there is more room for the customers. The merchants would agree. They would do it. Then they'd leave the meeting and think this is great, everybody's doing it. So the problem is solved. Now I don't have to do it. And the following morning they would park back in the lot. So would everybody else, and so they were all back to square one. It was like with OPEC where they all agree to cut production to raise prices and then everybody cheats. Same story.

As for the ticket dispensing machines, "shaky start," is the phrase the Village fathers used when describing how the dispensing machines fared this past weekend. They would take a little getting used to. And for now, a police officer, standing alongside the dispenser tells the drivers to just take the damn ticket and move along please. There are others behind you.

You know they could accomplish the same thing by just letting the brownies make chalk marks on the parked car tires. But, we wouldn't have all this fun. And we wouldn't be heading for – it's in the back of everybody's mind – paid parking. •

"So why do we like each other?" I asked.

"That's why," she said.

Inside, the tent, after a wonderful luncheon and fashion show, at which models paraded along a raised runway, car buff Peter Mole of Kensington Motor Group, Inc, serving as master of ceremonies, announced that the awards presentation would begin. I got up from the table, went up front, crossing a place under the tent where the cars rumble through, stop, receive a trophy, then rumble out, and stood next to him.

The cars, of course, were stunning. Old Ferraris and Porsches, Rolls Royces from the 1930s, Chevys from the 1950s, and oddities such as a jeep surrey with blue and white striped seats, no doors and fringes all around a canvas roof.

Seinfeld was introduced and Mole handed him the microphone.

"Well, that was a wonderful fashion show we just had," he said. "It's the first time I saw a fashion show where the fashions were out of date before the models got off the runway."

He looks, for some amazing reason, unlike the Jerry Seinfeld I've seen so often on television. Maybe it's three dimensions versus two dimensions. Anyway, for a moment I thought he was a stand in – but no, it was really Jerry Seinfeld. He wore a sports jacket over rumpled chinos that were a bit too long on the bottom. He's definitely not a fashion plate and he also wears glasses ,which I think explains – considering he doesn't wear glasses on the show – his 'not a clue' look.

He did a good job giving out prizes, making polite banter with all of the contest winners. Then Mole handed him the plexiglass trophy which he was to give for his own personal favorite in the show. Seinfeld looked at the trophy.

"From Jerry Seinfeld, it says – No: 'Seinfield– they've misspelled my name. What's the matter with you people? Didn't we make enough episodes? Didn't you see this thing?"

This drew howls from the audience.

"Well, they got the 'Jerry' right and that's OK with me," he said.

During a lull in the proceedings, when they couldn't get one of the cars started, Mole turned to Seinfeld. "I understand you're a big car collector yourself," he said. "Have you moved your cars here yet?"

"I just moved in yesterday," Seinfeld said, "so, no."

"Are you going to continue to collect cars?"

"Well, that's my personal business," Seinfeld said. He said this in an exaggerated way, trying to be serious but funny.

I think.

At the end of the awards ceremony I shook hands with him but he clearly had other things on his mind. The show was over and people were beginning to come over to him. The pre-show instructions said there would be photo opportunities for the press, but no interviews and Mr. Seinfeld seemed concerned about getting out. He now shook a few more hands of those who had come over to him, and then headed for the exits.

"It's over," someone said. "He's bolting."

Hearing someone say that made me shiver with embarrassment for him. I think it had been kind of him to make an appearance to raise money for this cause. I'm sure it would translate to a fair amount of dollars at the charity's cash register. I wish him well. We all wish him well.

He walked out of the tent, the sea of people parting for him, and he got in his car with his wife and drove off.

Life is so strange, isn't it? •

Run, Run, Run

Where Are All The Good Presidential Candidates? Is This Asking Too Much?

By Dan Rattiner

I'm having trouble deciding who I could support for President. I want an attractive, smart, honest but tough person to run things. Somebody who, in domestic matters has a compassionate touch and in foreign affairs, can be a good poker player.

We had that person in Bill Clinton, I really believe. And if, as my mother puts it, he hadn't been thinking with the wrong part of his body so often, he would go down as perhaps the best President of the Twentieth Century.

George Bush gets high grades in my book in most of these categories, except for the poker playing department. You can read this man's face like a book. There is absolutely no possibility he could get involved in trade negotiations with the Chinese, think one thing, tell them another, and not have them know exactly what is going on. I am also not so sure he's the smartest cookie in the box. I can't vote for him.

Al Gore, on the other hand, recently made one of the stupidest judgements I have ever come across, one that was so bad that I have come to question the basis upon which he makes them. At the beginning of the Elian Gonzales crisis, he supported Clinton and Janet Reno who declared the obvious, that the boy belonged with his father. Then, as this circus in Miami went on and on, and it was apparent that the Miami Cubans there were all caught up in their rightfully earned hatred of Castro, he flip-flopped and declared that they ought to be able to keep Elian. He did this flip-flop right after an announcement by the Miami Cubans that they would severely punish at the polls any government official who disagreed with them, and there were, indeed, a lot of them, and they could swing the state of Florida. I can't vote for a person who could be swayed like that.

With Hillary Clinton I have another problem... If we elect her senator, how long before she leaves us and runs for president?

Maybe I'll just vote for a third party candidate to register my displeasure and then, since either Gore or Bush is going to win, hold my breath and hope they don't screw up. And in fairness I should say I've been wrong before.

As for the Senate Race, I am having the same problem.

This new guy Rick Lazio is young and charming, vigorous and smart, a fiery orator who seems to be both focused and caring, but I'm not so sure he's not in somebody's pocket. I can't quite place it. There's a roughness to his good looks, an eagerness to please everybody quality. And he has come up the political ladder in Suffolk County, which has this long dismal history of politicians who see to it that if I get mine, you get yours and so do all your relatives, dating back to the Southwest Sewer District. I could vote for him. If he wins he won't be in a position to blow up the world anyway. But I don't like it.

With Hillary Clinton I have another problem. What kind of woman would have the reaction she did to learning of her husband's sexual indiscretions? There's something unreal about it. I know she's a lawyer. Lawyers can be very calculating. And I know that in the end she might have decided, did decide, to go with the flow and note that she loves the lout and they've got family and friends and she could make the best of it and so forth and I know that is normal behavior. But where, preceding that, was the ranting and raving and throwing of things normal behavior? There's not been even a hint of that, not privately and not publicly. I fear cold bloodedness and calculating qualities. If we elect her senator, how long before she leaves us and runs for President? Are we just her one night stand? Is that what we want for New York?

Well, maybe I'm just thinking too much.

Maybe I ought to just consider what the Republicans stand for and what the Democrats stand for. I mean, these people do belong to parties and the parties stand for something. Someone told me a story recently describing the difference. A Republican can be driving down the highway, come upon a woman by the side of the road with a flat tire and just roar on, noting that he is late for an appointment. A Democrat will stop to help the woman with the tire, but after awhile, will have the tire off sideways, the axle slipped off the jack and a few of the lug nuts fallen down a storm drain.

Damned if you do and damned if you don't.

There's got to be somebody out there somewhere I can vote for. •

The Run For The Potatoes

22nd Running Of This 10k Gets A New Location, A New Route And A New Date

By Dan Rattiner

The 22nd Annual Dan's Papers Minithon was held last Saturday morning. This is a 10k race that goes through the potato fields of Bridgehampton and Sagaponack. And no, that is not a misprint: it was Saturday morning, not Sunday morning, as it has been for the past twenty-one years.

It is a long story as to why it got moved from Sunday to Saturday. It involves the Bridgehampton Council of Churches, the Fire Department and Police Department and maybe it is because this event, a 10k run, has grown so large with so many people that it was just thought best to hold it early in the weekend rather than on the Lord's Day which should be a bit more peaceful and quiet. In any case, the whole thing was handled amicably and there were people on both sides of the question. In the end, the almost one thousand runners were invited to begin the race and end on the grounds of the Bridgehampton Presbyterian Church right on Main Street. This is perhaps one of the most beautiful churches in the Hamptons and the congregation dates back to the early settler days. The race earned almost $10,000 for the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

People began to assemble on the grounds of the church around eight o'clock Saturday morning, when registration opened. The first three hundred entrants received free t-shirts and that went pretty fast, but there were more t-shirts to be had and there were tables set up so runners could get free fresh fruit or magazines or books or pick up little samples of sun tan lotion from Ban de Soliel. There were massage people, medical people, weight loss people, people handing out information about future races and people dressed in their running clothes who did their stretches and exercises and twists and bends to loosen up.

It was a beautiful morning and Cathie and I had driven there in her convertible – which, because I had founded the race all those years ago, would be used as the car to lead people over the course.

Because of all the changes – the day and the start and finish line – there were also changes in the route the course would take. So I wandered around among the prospective runners, seeing old friends and meeting new ones and looked around for an information sheet about the race that would show the new route. There wasn't one. What there was, thumb-tacked to the wall of the church meeting hall, was an enlarged xeroxed copy of a Hagstrom map, with the route of the race in yellow magic marker.

There were many twists and turns in the route, some of them quite new, and there were a lot of runners crowded around it. I couldn't just walk off with it fifteen minutes before the race. So I took out a pen and a flyer and started to draw the route of the race on the back of the flyer. I would have something to take with me in the car.

"Where is the start?" a young woman asked me, noticing that I was quickly making a pen and ink drawing.

"Over here," I said.

"And then where does it go?" she asked.

Mike Going and Dan Rattiner

"The yellow line," I said.

"So I guess we just follow everybody?" the woman said.

"Follow me," I said. "I have to lead the race."

"Are you in a car, or are you running?"

That struck me funny. If I were running, how could I be sure I would stay in the lead? "I'll be in a car," I told her.

Now it was ten minutes until race time. People were milling around. I shook hands with Southampton Town Supervisor Vince Cannuscio, who was there to fire the starting gun and then I shook hands with Beth Brenner, the publisher of Self magazine. Self is one of the main sponsors of the race and everyone wears a little paper rectangle pinned to their T-shirt with a safety pin with the world "Self" on it. I mentioned that if you looked at them all together, it looked kind of silly.

"I know what you mean," she said. "It's like at the gas stations."

I thought about it.

"Oh," I said.

Children, husbands, runners, wives, police officers, race timers, sponsors – everyone was darting this way and that, heading over toward the starting line.

A woman jogged past me, shouting at a man up ahead in a white shirt and pants.

"Excuse me. You have a bullhorn. Are you one of the officials?"

Then she was gone.

Now it was five minutes to race time and we got into the car and drove 100 yards until we were just in front of the starting line that ran across Hull Lane. There was supposed to be a police car in front of us to follow to make sure we didn't make wrong turns – as once happened some years ago. It was one of the most awful moments of my life back there in 1997. I was talking with the people in the police car and I looked up to discover that almost a thousand runners were following me and I was no longer on the race course. We went 11.3k. But now there was no police car.

Promptly at nine thirty, the gun was sounded, everybody let out a cheer, and this thundering herd of people came directly for us. Cathie shifted into first and we roared off. Down Hull Lane, down Ocean Road, and then left onto Hildreth. By the time we were on Sagg Main it was apparent that one man was opening a substantial lead over the pack. Cathie was driving almost a hundred yards ahead and I squinted in the glare of the sun so I could read his number and write it down. "307"? I wasn't sure. Cathie slowed the car so the number would come into focus. It did. It read "Self."

I could see that he was a big strapping guy and then I thought this is the guy who won it a year ago. And indeed it looked like he was going to repeat. We went down Highland Terrace and then up Bridge Lane and then down another portion of Ocean Road to Mecox and he opened up his lead.

As we went along we could see that the preparations for the race put together by the volunteers from MS along with race promoter Linda Shapiro were outstanding. There were police officers at every corner, big sandwich boards with arrows on them, people with water cups on bridge tables and even mile markers.

Toward the end, the race came back up Ocean Road and then turned left back onto Hull Lane for the finish line. Mike Going, last year's winner, won the race going away, so to speak, in 32:22. He was more than two minutes and fifteen seconds ahead of the second place finisher, John Kenny. Craig Gates was third. The first woman finisher, Heather Greenbaum, age twenty-two, finished the race in thirty-eight minutes flat. I spoke with her after the race. She works for the Equinox Gym as a registered dietician and lives in Potomac, Maryland. Michael Going, twenty-seven, had grown up in Old Westbury, had gone to Wheatley and then Villanova and is now working at Citibank.

I stayed around the finish line a long time. It was wonderful to share in the enthusiasm of the crowd that greeted and cheered all of the runners as they came through. The entry form said no dogs, roller blades or bikes – but that didn't mean no little babies being pushed in prams by parents. There were at least six of them, the first of whom,

A Frenzy Of Real Esatate Development Ignores The Heritage Of The Land

By Chris Stanley

The rapid and sudden escalation of land development here on the east end of Long Island has become a matter of dramatic concern among native tribes, locals and the wealthy long-term residents of the Hamptons. Outside developers have acquired farm lands and open spaces, which are being cleared at a feverish pace to make room for rows of almost identical imitation farm houses, commercial buildings, and luxury estates.The very special ecosystems so characteristic of Long Island are being ruthlessly destroyed in a race to urbanization.

"The East End is gone," a local carpenter who prefers to remain unidentified said. "There are things I wouldn't work on. For fifteen years I refused to build certain things. I mostly restore old houses, but they're bringing work crews from up the island and they'll build anything. They don't live here and they don't care," he said.

A thirty-year resident of Shelter Island, who also asked not to be identified said, "They're building across the street from my house. They took down every tree. It looks like devastation. The animals don't know where to go anymore. I'm putting my house up for sale."

Visible development on the East End is only the beginning of projects that are already past their planning stages.

On Saturday, May 13, 2000, Shinnecock Land Defense Committee representative, Ruben Bess Valdez, lead a procession of concerned citizens on a tour of the lands that are under contract for development, from the Hampton Bays railroad station – the site slated for a huge supermarket and mall – to Red Creek, Flanders, Shinnecock Hills, and Southampton.

The development of two parcels on 'open space' land attracting the most public reaction are the 62.38 acre ancient Shinnecock burial grounds located beside Southampton College – and the 102-acre West Neck Hills (previously known as Tuckahoe Swamp) parcel located on Tuckahoe Road, between Millstone Brook Road and North Magee Street, owned by Charles Holmes from New Jersey.

Developer Parrish Pond Associates, represented by a Yonkers real estate, came into possession of the sixty-two acre Shinnecock burial grounds for just over a million dollars – land on which the Shinnecock tribal members had roamed freely for centuries – land immediately across from the Shinnecock reservation.

How did the town of Southampton allow this to happen to its own long-term residents? Why didn't the town officials protect this choice land for the people who had elected them? Why didn't the town buy these two choice open spaces with the monies allotted to it for the very purpose of preserving open spaces? And why did the town accept the report biased of an archeologist hired by Parrish Pond Associates rather than the impartial archeological findings of Dr. Gaynell Stone, Director of the Museum of the Suffolk County Archeological Association? Wouldn't you say someone's playing with loaded dice?

What was the town gaining by giving Parrish Pond Associates an easy shoe-in when its planning board neglected to notify the Shinnecock Nation about a subdivision that would impact on their reservation so directly? It was town policy to notify the Shinnecock Nation about subdivision planning board meetings whenever the land was considered to be Indian-sensitive. Why, in this one instance, did the planning board casually neglect to notify the Indians?

Lakota and Derek Whirlwind

Would the taxable future of a developed thirty-eight lot subdivision justify the ecological price the surrounding home-owners would have to pay?

How did an outside developer manage to snatch this parcel of land that experts say is "forty-seven percent maritime heathland, and a type of land that is almost nonexistent in New York State," away from the Shinnecocks – and how were they able to steal this "archaeologically sensitive land" from the citizens of Southampton for so little? And why did Southampton College, which was built on Shinnecock land, not support their Indian neighbors by allowing their protest teepee to remain on College land?

Supervisor Vincent Cannusio, under pressure from the Shinnecock Land Defense Committee and The Group For the South Fork, recently requested that the Southampton Town Board call for an appraisal of the sixty-two acre land purchased by Parrish Pond Associates from Lildom Estates; Mary Beras; and the Estate of J. Vincent Early for a total of just over a million dollars. The purpose of this appraisal was to attempt to buy back the land from the buyer.

The Department of Environmental Conservation could move to put a moratorium on the bulldozing while the town and Parish Pond Associates negotiate a purchase, but it has no jurisdiction without the backing of the state or the town. Why hasn't the town followed through on any procedure that would put an immediate hold on the destruction of this land? How much is it going to cost the town to buy back what it gave away so readily?

This past April, Justice Gowan chose to dismiss the Shinnecock lawsuit against Parrish Pond Associates and gave the developer the nod to resume bulldozing the land. The Judge was aware of all of the rules that had been broken by the town and yet chose to fault the Indian Nation on the one technicality they had not been responsible for – a thirty day statute of limitation. Of course, logic would tell anyone that the Indian Nation wouldn't have been late if they had been given the required prior notice by the Planning Board.

And now, for the 102-acre open space. Let's just ask one question... Why did the Planning Board replace the fifty acre freshwater wetlands map drafted by town chief environmental analyst, Marty Shea with a thirty-five acre map drawn by the State Department of Environmental Conservation?

According to Steve Biasetti, environmental analyst for Group for the South Fork, the DEC's map would allow the developer to bulldoze fifteen acres of wetland to build a road.

These two open spaces are on a priority list for land preservation, and the sixty-two acre ancient Shinnecock burial grounds purchased by Parrish Pond Associates, have been deemed "eminently eligible for the National Register of Historic Places" by Dr. Gaynell Stone, Director of the Museum of the Suffolk County Archeological Association. Again, I ask 'why have these two exceptionally important parcels of open space been served up for sacrifice?

Ecological Sensitivity

Environmental Studies Professor and president of the Group for the South Fork, Robert S. DeLuca warned that a subdivision of the 102-acre West Neck Hills property into twenty-eight eight lots for homes would impact on the quality of water in the area. Lawn fertilizers and pesticides from the new houses would "pollute from thirty-five to fifty acres of freshwater wetlands, which now contain rare vegetation and an abundance of wildlife, as well as a fragile watershed area."

The land on West Neck Hills is a major watershed to the South Fork groundwater supply, and part of the federally protected Peconic Estuary System. Additional pesticides and fertilizers, which would drain into Bullhead Bay, would increase already high levels of nitrogen, reducing oxygen and endangering rare marine life, such as one of the last beds of eel head grass west of Shelter Island.

Drinking wells would also be contaminated by the run-off of additional residential pesticides and fertilizers. The Planning Board also neglected to order the environmental impact study required by law. Again, why didn't it?

Wildlife Holocaust

Has wildlife on the East End of Long Island somehow escaped the threat of development longer than many other areas. It was a haven for wealthy New Yorkers who wanted to keep it rural and beautiful for their nature retreats.

As we begin a new century, even the Hamptons are being lost to the frenzy of outside developers from New Jersey, Yonkers, Florida, and other parts of the United States. Wildlife is being pushed into extinction. The American Indian way of life is being threatened with genocide. Indians, who once roamed freely across the entire continent, are being forced into the confines of ever-shrinking reservations.

After Justice James J. Gowan dismissed the Shinnecock Land Defense Lawsuit and gave the developer permission to resume the bulldozing, hawks, rabbits, deer, and wildlife of every description fled – many to their deaths as they collided with grid-lock traffic on all the surrounding roads. There was no place else for them to go.

Shinnecock Land Defense representative, Ruben

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

I don't understand why people drive so badly on holiday weekends. I used to own a boutique on Main St. in Bridgehampton. The sound of sirens going by was a constant on all the major holiday weekends. Often Labor Day weekend brought out the shoplifters, as well, and one year we had a run in with a team of gypsies who were "working" the yard sales. We had a yard sale behind the shop and because we had advertised it in the local papers, the gypsies found us. My employee caught them and took back about $500 worth of stolen clothing.

I received a call on Sunday from my friend Barbara Hearst. She said she had a topic for this column. She had just survived an accident. She had driven up Lumber Lane in Bridgehampton and turned into a driveway belonging to a friend. She was about three car lenghts off the road when she was rear ended by a Ferrari. She needs a new rear bumper and was grateful for having high backed seats that kept her from severe whiplash. The Ferrari will need to be replaced. The driver was going so fast that he swirved off the road and hit Barbara's car with great force. She was shocked. She said he simply wasn't watching the road. There was a pretty girl in the car and his eyes seemed to be on her. Why he was speeding up a quiet country road is anyone's guess. It may be that after sitting in traffic for hours, he simply needed to experience a little velocity. I can't imagine he was in that much of a hurry. If he was, having an accident certainly slowed him down. If he was experiencing road rage, he could have stayed wherever he came from and taken it out on the drivers at home. When in the country, it makes sense to slow down and I don't mean only while driving.

Another thing that I don't understand about the cars that go by is how people deal with stereo speakers that blow your eardrums out. Obviously these people don't care about hearing loss. High decibel levels do lead directly to hearing lose. A car went by this weekend with so much bass, it seemed to make the earth shake. The music was loud from way down my driveway. I can't imagine how loud it was inside the car. My friend Owain told me a story of a car with music so loud that the driver didn't hear the fire truck that was coming up behind him. The result was fatal. The fire truck ran over the car and driver. What a way to go.

Barbara Hearst went home shaken but okay. She told the story of the accident to a young man who was working in her yard. He asked what color the Ferrari was. It seems he was almost run over

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #108
Six Days Before the Mast

Shelter Island, Block Island and Fishers Island schools have the good fortune to have our combined seventh grade classes granted a six day schooner trip by the Harvey Gamage Foundation. For six days and seven nights, the two schooners will carry over thirty twelve years-olds and twelve unlucky adults up the coast with stops at Mystic and Nantucket.

The schooners have no electric winches and the mail sails are in excess of 3000 lbs. The kids have to crew the whole trip, stand four hour night watches, clean the head, take a turn at the helm, learn knots and perform all tasks nautical. It will increase their self esteem, increase their sense of responsibility and teach them the value of teamwork. It says so right in the brochure.

On Sunday, May 21, all parents and kids gathered for a farewell barbeque at the Manor House on Mashomack preserve. My friend, Jackie, whom I am not speaking to this week, told me the easiest way to get there. HA! We bounced for four miles over the worst dirt road on the Island. I felt like we were on safari. Knocked the ice out of mother's drink three times. I was able to pull some redemption from it by using the contorting motion and sqeaking of the van to teach my daughter about pitch and yaw.

Finally, we arrive. With Mark K. commanding the grill and women setting up tables of food. We unload my daughter's bags and her friends run up. Now, I'm expecting them to be excited about the trip and say something boat related. Nope. Her friend said, "None of the boys from the other islands are cute." Another said, "Did you bring hair gel? I forgot mine." Yup, I can see these girls hoisting a sail.

My daughter fought me on everything. Take sunscreen – no I don't need it. I bought you Bonine for seasickness – no, I won't get sick. Take sunglasses – no, the sun's not going to be that bright. Take a sleeping bag, ships get cold – no, I hate sleeping bags. Take a hooded sweatshirt – no, they look stupid. I'm buying you an anorak with a hood – no, I'm just taking a sweater.

Take clean underwear – why? They said there's no showers. Take a toothbrush – why? We're not going to school on the ship. She just wanted to take all her clothes, hair and makeup items and some games.

I prevailed only because I can still take her in a fight. But somewhere, three nights from now, a tired little girl, wearing clean underwear and smelling of sunscreen, will climb into her cozy sleeping bag and be grateful for a monster mother.

The Bon Voyage barbeque was delightful. Our principal, Gil DeCiccio took pictures and Ed McDonald, one of the teachers, gave the kids a short speech about what a wonderful experience this will be for them. Mr Becker, a teacher going

Bess Valdez, has been observing the devastation. "80 head of deer have been driven off the Parrish Pond property and many smaller animals have been hit in the surrounding roads while trying to get away from the bulldozers," he said. "Deer are grazing on the golf course. They will be taken away as pests." About the West Neck property, Mr. Valdez said, "It is one of the few remaining peeper swamps in Southampton where the tree frogs sing in spring. A subdivision of West Neck would kill all that in a day."

The Spiritual Issue

Parrish Pond Associates claim that at least 736 shovel probes were made on the entire 62-acre subdivision in search of proof that they were burial grounds. They also claim that sufficient proof could not be found.

"Indian people are buried sitting up with the tools of their trade beside them," Ruben Bess Valdez said. "The probes only have to go eight inches deep. We buried our people deep into the earth."

Derek Whirlwind Diskin, Northeast Regional Council Chair for AIM, a national organization that fights for American Indian rights and land disputes, said, "It's a principle issue. When white people bury their dead you see headstones in a large cemetery, but you don't see contractors or developers digging up those cemeteries. Here you're talking about a culture and a people who don't bury their dead like that, with giant headstones."

review: the woman in black

By Joan Zandell

This season, the Bay Street Theatre is off to a spine-tingling, smashingly theatrical start with a two-character, frighteningly exciting production that will have you sitting on the edge of your seat! The Woman in Black is theatre as it is meant to be. This "spine chiller" comes to us from London's West End. Engaging, intimate, and gripping, you are drawn into the story of Arthur Kipps, a London solicitor, obsessed by terrifying memories from his youth. He hires a young actor to re-enact these memories from a book he has written believing that "the way to banish an old ghost is to exorcise it... through the writing and then the telling. "

The story begins as the young Arthur Kipps is assigned the task of organizing the estate of the recently deceased Alice Drablow, an eccentric woman who spent the last years of her life alone, in far from splendid isolation living in a house on the rain-swept Yorkshire coast. Access to the mainland is possible only twice daily when the tide goes out, over a road known as the 9 Lives Causeway. Off we go, into icy, rainy plains escorted by frets, fogs so thick and yellow that it is impossible to find your way through them, plummeting seductively into a mysterious world filled with ghosts, memories, silence and tragedy.

The performances by both Jason Butler Harner, who recently closed the American premiere of Tom Stoppard's, The Invention of Love at the American Conservatory Theatre, and Josef Sommer, the recipient of two Obie Awards as well as a NY Drama Desk nomination who most recently appeared in the MTC's production of A.R. Gurney's Labor Day and David Hare's Racing Demon, are extremely well crafted, entertaining, and moving. In other words, the performances by these two actors are outstanding. The direction by Leonard Foglia, is inventive and theatrical, keeping us on the edge of our seats as he moves us. The set design by Michael McGarty is imaginative and brooding. The clutter and the crannies leave enough room where ghosts and our imaginations can hide. The lighting design by Brian Nason is wonderfully clever, at times suggesting a complete set change, only through the use of light. And in this play I must acknowledge Randall Freed, the Sound Designer, without whom narrative could not become sound, and Mit Out Sound, this play would hardly exist. In this performance, our senses as well as our minds are invited to participate. The play written by Stephen Mallatrat based on a novel by Susan Hill will have you on the edge of your seats. For a markedly entertaining evening in the theatre don't miss A Woman in Black at the Bay Street Theatre, it runs through June 11th! This play is a MUST SEE. ● by a Ferrari the day before. Her accident was with a blue Ferrari. His near miss was with a yellow Ferrari. There is clearly a problem with more that one driver.

Last week I was speaking with a wonderful sculptor named Steve Weiss. He has a number of motorcycles. He loves to drive fast. He reinforced something my husband knew to be true. If you want to drive fast, go to the racetrack. All the drivers are going in the same direction. Emergency service is available and most of the drivers are very experienced. This makes sense.

Please drive slowly and carefully especially on Holiday weekends. My husband was killed in an accident on the fifth of July. I never thought to ask him to go out touring on another weekend. From where I sat at my desk this weekend I could plainly hear the ambulances go by. It's a haunting sound. Slow down and don't forget to smell the flowers. It will make you more relaxed.

fully strapped and bundled in tightly, came across the finish line with a look of wonderment on his little two year old face. Another came across the finish line fast asleep.

For a while I listened in on John Kenny, the second place finisher talk to a reporter from the East Hampton Star. He said he had been in almost every race since its beginnings twenty-two years ago.

"What were some interesting ones?" he was asked.

"Well, the first two I was in," he said, "the route crossed the Montauk Highway and the railroad tracks. I remember in the second race we had to wait for almost a minute because a train was coming through. We just jogged in place."

I remembered that well, It was in 1980. And if John Kenny, by his application, was 43, he was 23 back then.

"Another year," he said, "there were heavy rains and everyone showed up to run anyway, and they cancelled. It got rescheduled in August and we had to run in 96 degree weather."

I remembered that one too, and he wasn't quite accurate. I stepped forward.

"The year it rained," I said, "it also flooded. The roads were impassable. You would have been running up to your knees."

We were standing adjacent to the rope "chutes" the timers had set up for the runners to come through at the finish line and the cheering and clapping was suddenly interrupted behind us by someone shouting, "There's a problem! There's a problem!"

I turned. There was a ten year old Volvo station wagon, inside of which was a man with white hair trying to pull the car out of his driveway, out onto Hull Lane. I motioned for him to hold up. He could not come into the middle of all the runners. And then, looking at the layout of the chalk stripes and chutes and banners at the finish line, I realized that nobody had paid any attention to how the finish line related to the driveways on the lane. The finish line was exactly in front of this man's driveway. He wasn't going anywhere.

I walked over to him and we looked at each other through the driver's window. We knew one another. This was Cyril David, who years ago had been art director at Dan's Papers,

"I didn't know you lived here," I said to Cyril.

"I have a studio here, up above the playschool. It's the best studio I ever had."

"Where are you going?" I asked.

"I have to go to the photo shop to have some film developed."

"It might be better if you could go a little later," I said." "Is there any hurry?"

"Not a huge hurry," he said. "But I've got to send it off to the printer in the city before the end of the day. It's for a brochure."

"I remember when you left the paper," I said. "You went off with Joan Baron. Are you still with her?"

"Oh, yes," he grinned. "In fact, the brochure is for her art show. She's having an opening in September at the Lizan-Tops Gallery in East Hampton."

"Well, say hello for me," I said.

"I'll try it again in a little while," Cyril said. "I can wait."

I made a note to talk to the organizers of the race after the event about the driveways on Hull Lane.

The runners were coming in with less frequency now. They were more spaced out. Along came a very elderly man toward the finish line. There was a category for eighty and up and with thirty yards to go he broke into a sprint to the cheers of the crowd and crossed the finish line with arms raised.

Someone came over and thanked me for holding the race on Saturday morning instead of Sunday morning. Then, as I was walking back to the church meeting hall for the award ceremonies, someone came over and said, "We liked it better on Sunday mornings, back on School Street in front of the fire house with that guy on a motorcycle leading the race playing "Chariots of Fire" on his tape deck."

Well, that was then and it was fun and this is now and it is fun. See you next year.

land. "You cannot own the land, " he said. It is a spirit. It is like destroying a white man's church or stealing a cross. The cross is a symbol, not even the real thing, like the land."

During the five-day protest, last February, the Shinnecock tribe asked the State Troopers if they would allow a small religious group to enter the burial grounds for a few minutes so that they could consecrate the land and have a brief ceremony of closure with their ancestors. The Indians promised that they would all go home if they would be allowed those few minutes for a spiritual ceremony. They were denied. Why? Is their right to worship any less than anyone else's? Just because their church is the sky above and the earth beneath their feet? Even if their sermon was just the cry of an eagle, do we have the right to invalidate their spiritual beliefs?

To American Indians land is a sacred thing on which man lives. It cannot be bought or sold. It is not his to exploit. Land is to be honored and taken care of with the reverence for life itself.

I wonder what will happen when all of our open spaces are lost to neatly manicured multi-million dollar estates. I wonder about the flooding that will occur when every acre of indigenous land is divested of trees – torn from their roots by bulldozers to make room for tennis courts and multi-car garages. I wonder about the sewers that will back up when the heavens deluge us with their tears of mourning. And I wonder how Mother Nature will punish us for the mutilation of her landscaping and the holocaust of her wild life. I wonder what the countryside will look like after developers level all growing things to make room for planned gardens and "bigger and better" highways.

I remember walking down Main Street Sag Harbor on a Sunday morning last summer, and being assaulted by the stench of an over-flowing sewage system. I realized that my friends and neighbors were allowing developers to destroy our natural habitat. A little voice inside me whispered, "They're pushing the animals into extinction and we, the locals, will be next... all for profit... and the greed of the wealthy." • on the trip (he lost the toss), reiterated the importance of safety and looking out for each other. I looked at poor Mr. Becker and my heart went out to him. I pictured him in the middle of the ocean, tied to the mainmast wearing a pirate hat, while thirty kids form a conga line down the deck.

I fear my daughter's turn at the helm. They're going to teach them basic navigation. I await the phone call from Charleston, VA. and hearing my daughter say in her best innocent voice, "I don't know what happened Mom. All the stars look alike but Jody and I lined the boat up perfectly, but then the boys fooled around with the compass and one of them threw up on it. It wasn't our fault... really Mom."

The Harvey Gamage docks at Piccozzi's Dock at noon on Saturday, May 27.

They insist you take home the same child you brought, no trading up. And if my daughter departs down the gangplank with a tatoo of "Harvey Gamage 2000" on her arm, I will depart her teeth from her head. •

BASSO IS BOFFO

The day had Dennis Basso's fur fashion show and the night was for celebration at the Rainbow Room. It was a Hamptons happening because all the guests are familiar faces from Out East. I can only say that anyone who didn't have a great time at Dennis' big party either got stuck in the elevator or dropped risotto on her designer dress. It was an evening that Dennis and his friend Michael Cominotto seem to clectrify. The cocktails were quiet, a little time to shmooze gossip or business or golf depending upon where you stood. Then the dinner was in a beaulilbily decorated room, flowers everywhere. The first course was risotto and then came the dancing and this crowd could really shake their hips. Then after dinner, up came Neil Sedaka to sing "Calendar Girl" and a few other of his hits and got everyone singing along, and just when you thought this was the top, we discovered that Natalie Cole was up next to sing "Unforgettable" and then her new song co-written with Denise Rich. Natalie got everyone up to sing and dance along with her. Quite a night.

CELEBRATING LIFE

Nurit Kahane and her husband Werner Haase had a lot to celebrate. It was her 5Oth birthday, their 26th anniversary and they had a new home in Southampton. So why not throw a big summer season-opener bash at their new home. To celebrate life, this party's theme, women were asked to wear white gowns and men were asked to wear white jackets for the guys. The Summer's White store (not to be confused with Sommers White) got sold out. Many of the guests dressed in their best white outfits for the party. When they arrived they were greeted with white gloved servers with champagne and then treated to hors d'oeuvres from the restaurant Daniel. Then came a many course dinner and dancing to a live group of singers and musicians.

DAN'S WINE LIST

Very much a work in progress, Long Island's vineyards have flourished thanks to the performance of a consistently solid trio of French wines: Merlot, Chardonnay and Cabernet Sauvignon. Coming soon: A strong presence of Italian grapes, represented by newcomer Castello di Borghese / Hargrave Vineyard. As the pioneering Hargrave changes hands, so, to a degree, does its planting focus. If its Sangiovese succeeds, expect it to be only the tip of the rootstock. p. 53.

The competition among different varietals of grapes for supremacy on Long Island's vines has begun to unmistakeably favor the merlot. Fast becoming Long Island's signature wine, the region's merlot is frequently cited among wine critics as the East Coast's best wine. On the horizon . . . An all-merlot winery (Raphael). p. 55.

Here on the East End, the vineyards virtually stretch to the sea. A slide down the sandy bluffs leads to another emblem of Long Island's bounty: Its incredible array of fresh sea fare. Our commentator finds the happy middle ground where water meets wine. p. 55.

The topography of New York state, it has been noted, has examples of every major land feature, save deserts. The climatic diversity that led to such geology has helped spawn four distinct wine regions within the state. Long Island is the new kid on the bloc – and with 233 days to the growing season, the one on the verge of international recognition. p. 56.

The world is not just the oyster for Mattituck's Heritage Inn restaurant, but on a recent visit, its baked brie en croute as well. Creatively prepared Swiss dishes were the international order of the day and our diners' culinary experience was far from neutral. p. 58.

From Greenport to Amagansett, the East End sparkles with fine wine and spectacular restaurants. Dan's Papers peeks in on some notable tables and tasting rooms. p. 60.

In Tasting, L.I. Wines Hold Own vs. French

By Richard J. Scholem

"Either prestigious French wines are wildly overpriced, Long Island wines are the buy of the ages or both. At least those were the conclusions that resulted from a recent blind tasting of Lenz Long Island wines and high-flying French headliners like Chateau Pétrus 1992, '93 and '94, J. Drouhin, Montrachet Marquis de Laguiche 1994, '95 and '96, Veuve Clicquot Gold 1989 and La Grande Dame 1988 and '89."

"And how do Lenz wines that cost from $10 to $30 stack up in head-to-head competition with French superstars? They equal or surpass them."

3000 miles closer than Napa Valley, 5,358 kilometers closer than Bordeaux, and only 70 miles from New York City, the world's most exciting and influential new wine region has emerged on Eastern Long Island.

As the praise and awards continue to accumulate, Long Island wines have become sought-after products in fine restaurants and wine shops from coast to coast and beyond national borders.

A Unique Climate

Once you have toured the area's vineyards and wineries you will better understand this astounding success. Snuggled between ocean, bay, and sound, few regions in the world offer the unique combination of climate, soil characteristics, and growing conditions so essential to the production of premium wines.

"The Graves-like subsoils, long and generally temperate growing seasons combined with a group of conscientious quality-driven producers, has resulted in some of the east coasts finest wines." ~World-wide wine authority, Robert Parker, December, 1999.

Since 1973 this beautiful maritime region has grown from one small vineyard to more than two dozen wineries, and will soon surpass 3000 acres of vines.

Borghese-Hargrave Vineyard – New Ownership, Old Traditions

By Roy J. Bradbrook

In 1973 when the Hargraves planted the first commercial vineyard on Long Island since the days of colonial rule, their objective was to produce wines which would stand scrutiny when matched against the top international competition. Alex & Louisa Hargrave worked very hard through their initial years of frustration in dealing with all the problems of bringing the vineyard to the point where the first vintage was ready and also in dealing with the problems of an industry and consumers who are, to put in mildly, noted for their innate conservatism and suspicion of new wines, let alone a new region.

By 1977, the Hargrave name was being associated with wines of high quality and over the years respected wine critics have described the Hargrave wines with such adjectives as 'profound', 'elegant' and 'the best of the region'. The winery won numerous awards and have the unprecedented honor of having won the Wine Spectator Critics Choice Award eight consecutive times.

Last year the vineyards changed hands when Italian prince Marco Borghese bought them from the Hargrave family, who are staying on as consultants. Marco came to the US from Italy at the end of the 60's, living in Philadelphia and dealing in a wide variety of imports and exports, including leather, textiles and fashions. 'I found the North Fork by accident,' he told me, ' I fell in love with the area and then I heard that Hargrave Vineyard was for sale and that is why I am here today!' The sale of the business was concluded finally in October 99, so this will be the first full season under the new ownership.

Already Marco Borghese has many plans for the long term development of the vineyard. 'We will keep the Hargrave Vineyard name but our wines will be marketed under the 'Castello di Borghese' label from this year's vintage onwards. One of the main things that attracted me to this vineyard was the fact that the wines are extremely European in character and I am looking to expand on this.'

Phil Keith is the Director of Sales & Marketing for the Hargrave Vineyard and he explained more of its philosophy, 'Even though Long Island vineyards are today producing wines of very high quality, we still have the problem that some people still do not recognize Long Island as a true region for wines. Because of a variety of factors we will never be a large region but we firmly believe that we are a very important area for high quality wines comparable to wine from the best areas of France and Italy..' Marco Borghese picked up this point, 'From tests we have carried out we believe that there is a very good future for some of the major Italian varieties of grapes to be grown here.'

Changes are on the horizon at the Borghese-Hargrave Vineyard

Marco Borghese researched the prospects for Italian grapes together with the help of a consultant and also with advice from Cornell University. " Sangiovese is the main grape used to make Chianti and some vineyards in California have managed to grow it there and all the experts agree that we should be even better able to grow this grape with our soil conditions and climate. We have now earmarked clones and rootstock and we will be planting 5 acres of Sangiovese grape vines this winter. The vines should bear some fruit in three years time but we will not really know how well we have done until the vines are four years old. Because of the long lead time it is not really sensible to plant less than five acres but even then we will only expect to obtain about 150 cases of wine a year. Of course we may decide to blend the Sangiovese with one of our white grapes as is done in Italy to produce Chianti.'

While the work with the new grapes continues, the vineyard will continue to offer its full range of traditional wines made under the direction of Mark Terry, the head wine maker and a native of the North Fork who has been with the company for some 15 years.

Among the range of white wines from Borghese-Hargrave is a Chardonette, which has all the attributes of a traditional Chardonnay but is stainless steel fermented and so has an absence of any oakiness and is recommended as a good every day wine with a retail price around $7. It is said to be especially suitable for summer parties where drinking rather than sipping may be the order of the day. If you are looking for a true Chardonnay which many find equal to a good White Burgundy then the Chardonnay 1998 Reserve ($16) is recommended and will complement dishes containing lobster, shrimp, salmon or poultry. Those wine drinkers who enjoy an aromatic Sauvignon Blanc Pouilly Fume will find that the Castello di Borghese Blanc Fume 1998 ($11) will be a perfect foil for Bay Scallops or other seafood dishes prepared with herbs. Similarly Hargrave produces a range of red wines to meet a variety of palates and prices. Petit Chateau, ($10), is their Estate Red blended in the Bordeaux tradition and which is a great casual wine to eat with pizza, pasta or again for a party evening. An interesting pairing for the Pinot Noir 1998 Reserve ($30) was suggested by Marco Borghese, 'Sometimes conventions should be set aside. I would not advise drinking this delightfully full bodied Pinot Noir with flounder but it really does complement Tuna. In the same way our Cabernet Franc 98 ($15), will go well with both steak and salmon.'

During the summer there will be a number of events at the Hargrave Vineyard. On July 29th., in conjunction with the East End Arts Council there will be a Country & Western Concert and in August they will be participating in the Wine Weekend. 'We want to let people know more about what we plan to do here and to let them sample our wines so that they can be reassured that the Castello di Borghese label is going to both carry on and develop the proud tradition of great wine making that this vineyard is famous for,' Phil Keith declared, 'We also intend to expand the use of our facilities for events such as weddings, birthday parties or corporate functions. As few as 25 or up to around 1000 people can be accommodated in our Great Hall, the Oak Room or out in the Vineyard or the Great Hall Grounds and we can offer a wide range of catering from the top local catering companies and restaurants.'

Marco Borghese is very obviously an enthusiast and someone who is determined to set and meet the highest goals in whatever he sets out to do. The Hargrave Vineyard has achieved a great deal of prestige in the world of wine since those pioneering days in the 70's and it seems fair to say that the best really is still to come.

The Merlot is Singing

By Mary Foster

"What's with merlot?" a visiting friend asked recently. "It seems like that's all everyone talks about."

The emergence of merlot as Long Island's premier red wine grape, and its popular appeal, may stem from several factors — from the grape's consistently excellence performance in Long Island's soil, to the serious effort early on by local winemakers to promote merlot as the "signature" wine of the region, to recent substantial vineyard plantings of merlot.

Mike, a friend of mine who likes his wine, and likes to know about a good thing, has been reading The Wall Street Journal. He remembers when they issued a Dow Jones North Fork Wine Index singling out for praise 10 of the area's wineries. And he follows what author and wine investor Bill Sokolin (The Complete Wine Investor: Collecting Wines for Pleasure and Profit) has to say. "Long Island is the next great wine region of the world," Bill told us.

That piqued my wine-friend's interest. A few months ago The New York Times singled out Long Island merlot and cabernet sauvignon as rivaling top reds from France. He is also an avid reader of the investors-guide, Smart Money, and remembers when they described the '93 merlots as some of the "best in the world" urging its readership to buy Long Island merlots as a good investment. And he remembers all those great "barrel tastings" events that the Long Island Wine Council put on each fall — where winemakers gave tastings of the recently picked merlot.

Then we got to talking about Raphael, a new winery on the North Fork. I had a chance to interview Raphael Vineyard's winemaker, Richard Olsen-Harbich, recently. According to Rich, Raphael is venturing into something unique to Long Island, which is to concentrate on the one grape variety they feel is the strongest – merlot. And they are making their merlot in consultation with Paul Pontallier, technical director of Bordeaux's Chateau Margaux.

Bedell's Merlot has been one of the region's best since its inception. The vineyard is also preservation-minded – as this antique water tank from Mattituck's old Wolf Pit Dairy will attest

Several other vineyard owners here are staking claim to a future in reds, planting only red-wine grapes. According to Olsen-Harbich, the "majority of planting now on the East End is in merlot." Merlot, he predicts, will now take over as the dominant variety. It used to be chardonnay, he noted, and all this new planting "shows that the focus, the future is in merlot."

Mike mentioned the recent Robert Parker review. The Wine Advocate, the most influential wine-review publication in the US, and possibly the world, discussed Long Island quite favorably in its December '99 issue:

"Long Island can produce some excellent wines that merit attention. The Grave-like subsoils, long, generally temperate growing season combined with a group of conscientious quality driven producers, has resulted in some of the East Coast's finest wines. The North Fork of Long Island's best recent vintages are 1993, 1995, 1997 and 1998"

Now, Grave is a wine region within Bordeaux. Most of its best wines are reds (Chateau Haut Brion being the most well known and most highly respected red from Grave) but it is also known for its excellent dry whites. Well, you might say, that's an interesting comparision...it

Try Tuna And Merlot

By Mary Foster

Take seafood. It's incredible here. I love all of Long Island's fresh sea fare, from lobster, to scallops, to oysters, and especially swordfish.

Just recently I was reminded of how unique this incredible range of fresh seafood we get here is. Long Island, for example, enjoys fresh fish more typical of our northeast neighbors (like lobster and cod) as well as that more known in the mid-Atlantic region such as soft shelled crabs.

In addition to what's caught off-shore, our great Peconic Bay and Long Island Sound provide us with delicious shellfish. I couldn't say if my East Hampton grandmother was a good all-around cook, but she certainly knew how to treat fish. Get it fresh, treat it delicately. Some of my fondest memories of her revolve around her cooking simplicity and delicious results... broiled bluefish with cracked pepper and lemon, fresh steamers in their buttery broth, orangey-red Manhattan-style clam chowder. Years later, I find I harken back to her cooking methods. It's also fun that there are some excellent local wines to pair with this bounty from the sea.

Here's some ideas. Our east end fish shops are chock full of local steamers, mussels and oysters – and these go wonderfully well with a crisp, bright, fruit-filled, dry chardonnay (at least the way I like them best, mussels meuniere steamed with wine and butter, steamers the same way, and simple, icy-raw oysters.) Or go a little more complex with the wine, say, a lightly oaked chardonnay, and pair it with baked local cod, sauteed flounder or fluke. Going yet more complex: pair richly herbed crab cakes, rich swordfish, salmon, softshell crab, lobster or grilled striped bass with a rich barrel-fermented chardonnay. Peconic Bay scallops, depending on how you prepare them, (very spare with ginger or a little rosemary to sitting in a creamy sauce) will signal the best wine choice: lean,"Chablis- style" stainless-steel chardonnay, to a creamy barrel-fermented one. Or, if you've gone heavy on the ginger, a great match would be a local gewertz or rieisling. In fact, the way you prepare any of Long Island's wonderfully fresh fish or shellfish will dictate the choice of wine — dry wine with a plain preparation, and rich barrel-fermented with rich sauces.

Stairway to culinary heaven... the steps from the Horton Point Lighthouse culminate at the headquarters of some of the world's most delectable critters – Long Island Sound

And what of Long Island duck, our signature dish? Well, chefs the world around say it pairs perfectly with merlot (also becoming a Long Island signature) as well as cabernet sauvignon and "Bordeaux-style blends." Many chefs now recommend Long Island merlot with a peppered, quickly-seared tuna. Sometimes I enjoy that interesting match. Sometimes I like mackerel with merlot, too.

Growing up, I didn't realize that all the good, fresh fare from my Grandmother's Long Island kitchen was so unusual. Having traveled to other places where "fresh caught" applies to a much more limited range of seafood, I now realize how our unusual geography had dictated a unique fishing heritage...and, more recently, a unique wine region. As savvy travelers the world 'round say, when dining, order local catch, drink local.

A Snapshot of New York State's Wine Regions

By Mary Foster

Just the other day, at a meeting with some people from the Albany area, someone said to me "I knew New York had wines, but I didn't realize Long Island's wine region was so extensive."

It was fun to talk with them about the four major wine regions in New York... And reminisce. I grew up in a grape-growing region, Lake Erie, at one end of the state, and now live in a wine district, Long Island, at the other end..

In between then and now is quite a story of changing times — "wine regions" emerging from agricultural areas, viticulture experimentation, changing American attitudes and tastes, changing state legislation. Suffice it to say, when I was growing up in the 60's in the Lake Erie region, dominated by Welch's grape juice production, these weren't wine regions – we grew grapes. (And, you could always earn some extra pocket money picking grapes in the fall.)

Today – after State legislators in 1976 made it legal for farm wineries to sell their wine at their wineries – it's wine regions. And New York has four: Lake Erie, Finger Lakes, Hudson River and Long Island. Furthermore, each region has distinct appellations.

A thumbnail sketch of these four regions reveals that the strength, and subsequent identity, of each area has much to do with climate – what their vineyards can grow.

Lake Erie and Chautauqua, the farthest west, sitting across from Canada on the Lake Erie shore is famous for its record-breaking snow falls. Chautauqua is still the largest grape growing county outside of California, with some 20,000 acres of vineyards. While there are, since the 1970's, French-American and European winegrape (Vitis vinifera) varieties vinified by local wineries. Concord is king. Excellent for table grapes, jellies and jams. It is the home of Welch Foods, making New York the largest grape juice producing state in the country.

The Finger Lakes. While I think the sunsets over Lake Erie are some of the most striking in the world, the Finger Lakes, with their rolling vineyards that cling to the lake slopes, has the beauty of Germany's Rhine River. So it comes as no surprise that Germany's top grape, riesling, shines here. Chardonnay and pinot noir make a good showing as well – and at their best as sparkling wine.

What better symbol of entering the world of Long Island wine than Lenz Winery's magical little passageway

The historic region of the Hudson River, the site of many battles in the French and Indian War, has its climate tempered by the pallisaded Hudson River. Fittingly, this region pioneered the French-American grape varieties – the white seyval blanc and red baco noir. Hudson River is also becoming known for the more delicate European grape varieties of chardonnay and cabernet franc.

Long Island. While the overwhelming majority of fine wine produced in New York is white, by comparison Long Island is known for both red and white – particularly merlot, cabernet sauvignon and chardonnay. "The Bordeaux of New York" the head of New York's wine and grape foundation likes to say. "Pomerol of the Peconics" I've heard said on several occasions by North Fork winemakers. Maritime Long Island is unique to the state in two crucial ways. First, it is the only area to exclusively focus on Vitis vinifera. Second, and importantly, it has the longest growing season in the state (averaging 233 days), and enjoying, by the way, the same number of degree days as the famed Medoc in Bordeaux.

An "Outsider's" Opinion

I found a "special tasting report" by Peter Kay of the Buyer's Guide on the web. Not from New York, but intrigued with our distinct wine districts, he set out to explore its wines, tasting 24 wines from all four regions. He noted that a range of different climates produce very different wines. On the other hand, of the two dozen wines he tasted (unfortunately none sparkling) he said there were some striking generalities: First, all the wines were "bright" and "clean." Second, in wines where oak was evident, it was used as only a supporting element in the fruit, never allowed to be overwhelming. "It seems that New York vintners have avoided the fixation with new wood that seems to dominate so much of the California wines that we taste," he noted. Third, no doubt owing to New York's cool climate – all the wines were light in body, high in acid, and relatively low in alcohol. "In short, we found these wines quite refreshing. There was the brightness and freshness that is overall associated with 'New World' wine making, coupled with a delicacy reminiscent of some of the cooler areas of Europe."

Small Estate Producers

It seems that throughout the U.S. and abroad, Long Island is becoming known as a wine region of small estate producers (e.g. quality vs quantity). And it is becoming known as specializing in three major wines, merlot, cabernet sauvignon, and chardonnay (and experimenting with growing host of other varietals.) Many local wineries produce merlot at between 500 - 2,000 cases per vintage. On the average, of the 21 winery vineyards on the North Fork, at least 20% of each individual vineyard is devoted to merlot. Early on, Bedell Cellars lead the way and committed the largest amount of land to this one varietal, about a third of Bedell's 30 acres in Cutchogue is planted with merlot.

"We planted merlot our first year, in 1980, with eight other varieties, not knowing what was going to do well on Long Island. Some varieties did well, some did not," said Kip Bedell. Bedell favorably noted merlot's consistency. " I planted it before it was so popular, essentially the reason I put in merlot was that it seemed to grow well and make intense, interesting wine on a consistent basis. Cabernet sauvignon, on the other hand, I think can make a great wine, but it has to have a good year."

Early Promotion Efforts

Ten years ago, in an early effort to promote the wine region (July of 1990), all the Long Island wineries together organized an international merlot symposium, that grew into the annual harvest-time "barrel tasting" of new merlots. One of the symposium's primary organizers, Dan Kleck, former winemaker for Palmer Vineyards and now with Kendall Jackson had told me "the feeling at the time was, in order for us to become regarded as a viable wine region, we needed the public to identify the area with one varietal wine. We had had success with merlot over the years, so we gave it our shot." The symposium, he believes, was highly successful. "We focused attention on the area, we attracted producers, researchers and chateaux managers from Bordeaux, and we could show off some good vintages, especially 1988."

How prescient. By the way, the name "merlot," according to French lore, comes from "merle" or blackbird — vineyard birds with a voracious appetite for the grape. Here, the pretty songbird pests are starlings and robins.

Swiss Treats at the Heritage Inn

By Roy Brodbrook

Bob Rinere grew up in the world of catering, "When I was 12 years old, I worked inn my father's restaurant and later on I had restaurants in Westbury & Hicksville until, in a life change, I became a publisher of scientific and religious books for many years. Then I retired, traveled in Europe and other parts of the world and spent extensive periods in Italy where my wife, Mary, has a house. Then we found the North Fork of Long Island which really reminded us of parts of Europe, especially with its wide range of fresh produce, fish and shellfish. So, we decided to come back into the restaurant business and opened The Heritage Inn about four years ago."

Today, The Heritage Inn has built a reputation among its regular clientele for providing well cooked food at realistic prices and for its regular introductions of Culinary Tours around the world. "There is no pre set pattern," Bob explained. "I consult with all of our suppliers and based on what is in season and what is particularly fresh, I sit down and produce menus using the best of these ingredients in a menu reflecting a particular type of cuisine. In the past we have had Greek, French, Mexican and this week we are focusing on Swiss-German dishes. As well as the specialty dishes which form complete dinner specials and include soup or salad, the entree, dessert and coffee for prices ranging between $17.50 and $22.50, we still offer our full range of a la carte dining.

During our visit, we sampled offerings from both the Swiss-German menu and the a la carte. Baked Brie En Croute was a satisfying blend of light flaky pastry around a succulent Brie, served at the correct temperature for eating without the risk of a burnt mouth. The accompanying slices of tart apple and a tangy raspberry puree were excellent complements. The portion, in common with many of the appetizers was amply sufficient for two diners. (Our server, Cheryl, proved to be extremely helpful, pleasant and knowledgeable, our suggestion would be to seek advice on serving sizes). Blue Claw Crab Cakes served with corn and tomato salad and sweet red pepper aioli had an excellent texture, being crisp on the outside and with a juicy plump filling which contained a high proportion of crab. The taste, though, turned out to be rather bland and short of the spiciness of a true Maryland or New Orleans Crabcake. When I asked Bob about this he admitted that the seasoning had been reduced from his original recipe, largely because this fitted in more with the comments of other customers. Without doubt the best of the appetizers which we tasted was the classic Cannelloni, a dish not seen enough on menus. The mix of ground veal, fresh spinach and ricotta cheese was wrapped in a crepe which matched up to the old adage that, the wrapper for a really good cannelloni should be thin enough so that you could read a paper through it. The canneloni was served with a smooth Béchamel and a tasty fresh tomato sauce. This dish should be a must when you visit The Heritage Inn.

Award-winning restaurateurs Bob Rinere and Mary Di Preta

We opted for the Fennel and Parmesan salad and were very pleased with our choice. This was a very simple mix of fennel which was thinly sliced and dressed with olive oil and lemon juice and thinly shaved Parmesan cheese. The blending of the slightly nutty fennel, aromatic of anise, together with the smooth but powerful Parmesan proved again that often the most successful dishes are the most simple, as long as the ingredients are fresh and of the highest quality.

Then we had one entree from the Swiss-German menu and one from the a la carte. Both choices were made because they were ones we had enjoyed in other restaurants in other countries and so had a standard for comparison. Emince de Veau Zurichoisse is probably one of the most famous dishes found in good restaurants in Zurich and it is a dish that had been enjoyed there many times in a previous existence. The menu listed it with home made Spatzle noodles but we opted to have it served with Rosti, that deceptively simple sounding blend of potato and onion. The thin sliced veal, sautéed with mushrooms and served in a light cream sauce, had all the flavor and delicate texture we hoped for. The Rosti was suitably crisp on the outside but the potato inside was slightly overcooked. The dish was delightfully plated and the accompanying melange of snow peas (mange tout) and thinly sliced yellow zucchini and carrot was perfectly al dente. The other entree was the Grilled Double Cut Lamb Chops. The generous portion of chops were grilled precisely to the degree specified and together with the home made fruit chutney gained full marks from us. Bob explained that he will only use New Zealand lamb chops from one supplier he fully trusts to come up with the quality he requires. If you have been fortunate enough to eat New Zealand lamb in its homeland, or even if you haven't, these are highly recommended.

Dessert is, for many, the highlight of an evening's dining out and The Heritage Inn tries hard not to disappoint. Profiteroles, filled with ice cream and topped with chocolate sauce and served with fresh whipped cream disappointed because the choux pastry was rather heavy. However the Deep Rich Flourless Chocolate Cake served with fresh whipped cream and raspberry sauce will satisfy the most ardent chocaholic and this without any trace of a cloying after taste. For us the Apple Strudel from the Swiss-German menu was the highlight and would have graced restaurants in those countries. The strudel pastry was light and delicate in taste with its filling of apples and raisins with a hint of cinnamon Good coffee brought a very satisfying meal to a close.

The wine list offers a range of Long Island, Californian, French and Italian wines which are realistically priced

The Joys of Eating

By Roy Bradbrook

The eighteenth century French gastronomist, Brillat-Savarin decreed that 'Animals feed themselves, men eat, but only wise men know the art of eating.' To be politically correct today, presumably it would be necessary to substitute people or persons for men but the truth of this aphorism remains today even after so many years have passed.

How can you bring wisdom to eating and turn a routine bodily function into a source of pleasure? Certainly it is not a question ofjust throwing money at it. Like everything else that is worthwhile, eating well takes practice and above all it requires you to have an open mind. Have you ever cringed to hear someone decry 'foreign' food such as food with garlic or cumin or lemon grass or basil and then found that they have never even tried the offending substances. While most of us have a tendency to be conservative in life and prefer the known the unknown, this should not stop us from being reasonably adventurous when it come to food. If any of you are guilty of always ordering the same items from the menu of the favorite restaurant and if in doubt order a fillet steak, why not determine to start the new century resolving to be just slightly daring in future. Who knows, you may enjoy it!

One thing I very quickly learned when we moved to Long Island was that the combination here of ethnic groups and city dwellers used to a wide variety of choice has resulted in a range of cuisine which would be hard to match in most cities of the world (but where oh where is there a good Indian restaurant). Restaurants on Eastern Long Island work very hard to attract customers particularly because of the transient population with the all to short peak summer season and we all have seen restaurants we regularly use change hands or even close completely because they have not succeeded in meeting the needs of the potential clientele.

When we venture out to eat, what are we entitled to expect. Above ail else, there should surely be value for money, whether it is a special occasion at one of our top restaurants or merely an early bird dinner out of season. We should expect freshness because we are blessed to live in an area bountiful with locally grown vegetables and locally caught fish and even though many of us are focused on the new Ducks performing in Islip, there are still varieties of the real thing available on the Island for our dining tables. We are entitled to friendly and helpful service and help with menus and wine lists where we need then.

All of this really leads in to the reasons for this article and the ones to follow. Our aim will be to keep you up to date with everything that is happening in the vineyards of Long Island and also from other parts of the US and abroad. Hopefully from this you will be encouraged to try different wines, according to your tastes and pockets. The same will also be true for the food reviews. You will not see bad reviews

The sale of Bedell Cellars to New Line Cinema's Michael Lynne is pending, but fans of Bedell wines take heart. Winemaker Kip Bedell will be under contract as Bedell's winemaker for another five years. Look for major renovations to the tasting room in the future. Meanwhile, the winery's latest releases, including its '98 Viognier and '97 Merlot have become instant smashes.

Connoisseurs of wine shops take note of Wines by Morrell in East Hampton. This lovely shop features an extensive collection of wines and spirits from around the world. Of special interest is a wine tasting area, highlighted by a seven-foot diameter Parisian tunneau (wine barrel) built in 1850. The shop conducts wine tastings with representatives from various local vineyards.

Coeur des Vignes, Southold's award-winning restaurant, has a new feather to add to its chapeau. Chef Aristodemos Pavlou gained induction to the Long Island Hall of Fame at the Great Chef Gala 2000, May 8. Aristodemos received "The Culinary Award of Distinction," on behalf of the Suffolk Community College Culinary Arts Program and the S.C.C. Foundation, Inc. The honor is bestowed on executive chefs for their demonstration of professionalism, dedication, innovation and commitment to culinary education and the training of new chefs and hospitality staff.

Amagansett's Pacific East Restaurant and Sushi Bar is presenting a wine-tasting dinner each Wednesday through September. The five-course sit-down tasting dinner will feature Castello di Borghese and Channing Daughters this month.

Jeanne Lamendola, Special Events Manager and Susan Skrezec, Tasting House Manager did a yeoman job of serving Palmer wines to the players at the grand opening of the new Long Island National Golf Course in conditions which were far from summerlike. They manned the 8th hole throughout the afternoon and by the time that the last pair came through the conditions warranted a generous helping of the Gluhwein beloved at Alpine ski resorts rather than a cool Chardonnay or a soft Merlot!

Greenport, the village of incongruities, boasts none greater than the charming Greenport Tea Company. Anyone who has ever felt at home in the tea shops of Dublin will take heart at this quintessentially European-style restaurant on Main Street. Right alongside Curran's Irish Goods, these two establishments truly put the Green in Greenport.

Looking ahead, one of the highlights of the winery season should be the visit of Scott Tarwater to Palmer on August 26. Scott is from the Fulton Crab House and Portobello Restaurant and Walt Disney World in Orlando and will conduct a tasting and aromatic session which will be followed by a Wine Dinner catered by the Salamander Gourmet Grocery Store in Greenport. This will feature local produce paired with Palmer wines. The Toby Altman Jazz Trio will play for dancing. The evening will run from 7 till 11 p.m. and tickets are $75 per person. Call (631) 722-9463, extension 21 for tickets and more information.

Ann Marie and Marco Borghese, the new owners of the Hargrave Vineyard recently held a "Celebrate 2000" party for their friends in the restaurant and retail wine trade which gave them a chance to meet the Borgheses and the new management team and to taste the wines from this, the oldest vineyard on Long Island.

of any restaurant because any restaurant can have a bad day and make mistakes. If this happens while we are eating there, naturally we will make the comments known to the management, just as anyone eating out should do, in a reasonable manner, if they feel they are not receiving the quality of food they are expecting. Publishing bad comments though, while it may make good copy is not fair when one is dealing with the livelihood of people. We will publish reviews of restaurants where the basic criteria have been met while eating there. Of course some of the restaurants will be better than others and hopefully the reviews will reflect this in an objective manner and point out what are considered to be their specialties. Overall our aim will be to try and persuade you to try something different and so to move forward on the path of becoming even more wise in the art of eating and drinking.

filled with warm crusty country type bread, which we had to ask to have taken away before we ate so much of it that our enjoyment of the meal itself would have been blunted. Also, the food is served on really hot plates, would that this were the rule in all restaurants on Long Island!

The Heritage Inn has a relaxed country atmosphere with a blend of European and American influences in its decor. They open for lunch from 12 midday and the dinner menu starts from 4 p.m. They also offer home catering for between 8 and 150 people and the Inn is available for wedding or rehearsal parties.

Bob & Mary are the first to admit that starting up a new restaurant is a stressful and incredibly busy affair, especially if you set out to offer a menu more adventurous than the norm in the area. However they are pleased with the overall response and particularly that Bob was honored last year with the Culinary 'Award of Excellence' for professionalism and dedication from Suffolk County Community College following three unannounced visits to the restaurant.

Recommendation.

Based on our visit we will certainly go back to the Heritage Inn. The menu is varied and interesting, the food is well prepared and the staff are friendly and welcoming. Bob & Mary say that they take pride in everything they do and the results certainly make for a pleasant dining experience, especially if you are prepared to be slightly venturesome.

Wines By Morrell

Possibly one of the most attractive wine shops in the country is presently in East Hampton. Located at 74 Montauk Highway in the Red Horse Shopping Mall, the shop features an extensive collection of representative wines and spirits from around the world including a large number of cold sakes, the finest wines from Long Island, summer roses, and a knowledgeable staff focused on service. The shop also features a climate controlled wine vault (Old & Rare Room), antique wine posters, wine antiques on consignment and a wine tasting area highlighted by a seven foot diameter tunneau or wine barrel built in Paris in 1850.

Various old wine and liquor bottles adorn the interior and one can find old maderas from the late 1800's as well as large casks of whisky from 1865 still in their original wooden enclosures.

Starting on Memorial Day Weekend and continuing each week on Saturdays from 4-7 p.m., the store will conduct wine tastings with various vineyards and producers featuring their best wines. In additional to the complementary wine, each presenter will share details about the wine, how it was made and how it should be served. An extensive collection of wines and spirits and friendly service make Wines By Morrell an exciting and unique shop to drop by and surround yourself in wine memorabilia and good conversation. So come on by and sit around the outdoor water fountain while sipping a cool glass of whatever suits your fancy.

Traditional Medicine In China

Attending the International Congress on Traditional Medicine (Beijing 2000) in China proved to be the breath of fresh air for mind and spirit I had hoped it would be. Traveling with an American Delegation of Traditional Medicine, we were guided and pampered every step of the way.

As I sat listening to the opening ceremony of speeches on April 22nd – Chinese Government Officials, Top Scholars in the field of Chinese Medicine, and Representatives from the World Health Organization (WHO) all spoke – I reflected upon how far Chinese Medicine had come in my home country, the United States, and how far my own journey to learn the medicine had catapulted forward. Here I was in a grand Conference Room with people from all over the world; Asians, Americans, Europeans, Africans, some thirty countries were represented. I wore a small headset to receive a simultaneous translation of speeches delivered in the Chinese language.

The theme of the opening speeches focused on the great importance of international exchange for the development towards contributions to health in the 21st century for the modern human being.

With many diseases posing both as threats and challenges for the new century, numerous countries are struggling to deliver a minimum of services. Rapid population growth, aging societies and poverty remain challenges to creating health for everyone around the world.

A united world, they told us at the Traditional Medicine Conference (Beijing 2000), can solve these health concerns.

Since health, as defined by the World Health Organization is a fine combination of physical, mental, and social well-being: facilitating the development of integrated medicine is the world's hope for addressing the issues of the 21st century.

Traditional Chinese Medicine cannot be static. "We don't want an antique from ancient times," they lectured, "it must grow and advance, as always, with each generation learning and adding to the knowledge gained through time." So relying on the foundation of the great treasure-house of Traditional Medicine and having the courage to be innovative is key in moving us forward to addressing the task of health for all.

I found it interesting to hear that "World peace promotes world health." Eighty percent of our worldwide population uses Traditional (Oriental) Medicine. It is embraced throughout our world of some 40 billion people.

Certainly, it was hard to miss the spirit of cooperation and exchange that was present at this conference. Promoting an international environment of mutual understanding and friendship requires some basics of mutual respect and support, friendly cooperation, unity and diversity, while blending modern and traditional medicines to bring us towards the common goal of accelerating global progress in the context of health for all.

There were some moments the magnitude of being at this Conference and its message made chills run up my arms. I didn't fully perceive the full power of this Congress of Traditional Medicine until our bus left the Conference Center in a motorcade of some 60 buses en route to The Great Hall of the People — traffic stopped, soldiers stood at attention and people stood with their bicycles as we whisked through the streets of Beijing, arriving en mass on the steps of the Great Hall of the People.

It was unusual for me to go out to dinner with a thousand people, pouring into the Banquet Hall in an orderly fashion. I was fully conscious now of the magnitude of Traditional Medicine — for I was in good company, being welcomed and honored by the Government Officials of Beijing with a thousand colleagues and scholars. It was a long way from my solitary studies with stacks of books at my home on Long Island. It opened my mind in a most refreshing way. We were on the crest of a powerful wave of energy, intellect and enthusiasm, moving into the future with strength and grace in the year of the Dragon. I felt so very lucky to be there. There was a force present that was beyond individuals, groups, and countries: it was my first experience of feeling part of "the global village." I was part of a worldwide family of healers. Everyone should have this euphoric feeling at least once in a lifetime. When I heard Kabba Anand speak I thought, "I remember him from Antioch College, back in Ohio." When one meets someone from college in the the Great Hall of the People, it makes one realize how integrated our world is becoming.

The following two days of the Congress were academically stimulating. Seven lecture halls gave numerous choices of subjects relating to acupuncture, herbs, research, and Minority Medicine (a new term for me). One could mortgage a conference pass for the use of a head-set for an English translation. There were various levels of translators, ranging from fair to excellent. When I found truly fluent translators, I tended to stay in those lecture halls and absorb what I could.

Hundreds of display booths promoted University Traditional Medicine Hospitals and Training Programs, along with display booths with products and information. Everyone was very friendly, and it seemed that being a Caucasian made one popular for being photographed with the Chinese. Many Chinese people, I found, did not speak English, but it was obvious to me that they are on the brink of change. A few young Chinese women proved to be completely fluent in English and I was happy to have lengthy conversations with them. A small girl outside the Congress smiled at me and sang "rain, rain, go away, come again some other day," and I was moved to envision a China where younger generations will be bilingual and fully able to communicate with the Western worlds of The United States of America and the European nations.

As our world gets smaller through world travel, the Internet, international economics, and certainly, integrated medicine, it is so important that we extend a hand of fellowship to all the members of our international family. We are one world. By attending this Congress, I felt I had reached out my hand in good faith and I found others reaching out to me. With unity in diversity, we all extended ourselves to each other. It was beautiful.

Air Hamptons – The Only Way To Fly

There I was on Friday afternoon, stuck in my car on the L.I.E., advancing at a snail's pace in the sweltering heat. My friends (those in my share-house) were talking (yelling) up a storm and all I could think was, THERE HAS TO BE A BETTER WAY! I then heard a commercial on the radio about chartering a plane to the Hamptons. It sounded so easy and inexpensive, why didn't anyone think of it sooner? This definitely seemed like the smarter approach to transportation. So the following weekend, I tried it and I was truly amazed.

Just imagine this – your car drives up to the airplane, you settle into your seat, the pilot shuts the door behind you, and you taxi down the runway. The airplane ascends ever so gently into the sky that you can't even believe you're airborne. I was in heaven, almost. While in the air, I tried to identify the different towns as we flew over them. But I have to admit, the most satisfying part was seeing all the bumper-to-bumper traffic down below on the Expressway. If only they knew of my secret. I couldn't help chuckling to myself.

Air Hamptons is a private charter company providing flights from the NYC area to all destinations in the Hamptons, as well as most points in the North East such as Martha's Vineyard, Cape Cod, Block Island and Nantucket (basically anywhere there's an airport).

Air Hamptons has a fleet of airplanes, highly experienced pilots, and each aircraft comes with a basket of snacks and cold beverages. But the best part is the price. If you charter an airplane and fill it with your friends or family, prices can start as low as $74 a person and you'll be in the Hamptons in only an hour! (Not bad considering the bus and the train take three hours in traffic.) How nice it was to watch the sunset from the beach rather than from my car.

Top executives and people in share-houses have been enjoying this means of transportation since Memorial Day. Once you experience a flight, you can never imagine going back to the highway. This is so much more efficient and hassle-free. I even convinced my parents to reserve a plane with Air Hamptons when they planned on spending the weekend in Nantucket. I was concerned about my mom being an adventurer but she loved the flight as much as my father did. It made their trip that much more enjoyable because they didn't have to deal with the constraints of a commercial flight. They were stuck in traffic on the way to the airport, but their private plane waited for them and departed as soon as they arrived. They were amazed to discover that as you head up north along the Atlantic coast, the ocean becomes as clear blue as Caribbean waters. And during the flight, the pilot pointed out all the different summertime locations as they flew over them, just like a sightseeing trip (who knew Martha's Vineyard was such a big island?).

I have to admit, if all the benefits of Air Hamptons private charter aren't enough to seduce you, the special treatment will, and for $74, you and your friends get to feel like real VIPs. No traffic, no hassle, no stress – just an enjoyable hour scenic flight. There is no better way to travel. Why didn't I do this sooner?

Shop'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

Well, now that the Memorial Day Weekend is over and the town is just a bit quieter, my family went back home after a wonderful weekend together, with the exception of my mom and sister Paula. We decided to look for some real hot sales and I thought I would show them just how hard I work. So let's shop!

We started out in Southampton at Saks Fifth Avenue on Main Street. Finally, the Lancome promotional seven piece gift set! It's all yours with any Lancome purchase of $25 or more, six great products tucked nicely into a pale yellow cosmetic case. My sister and I have been waiting a long time for this special deal.

On Jobs Lane in Southampton at Table D'Art there is a fantasyland of wonderful tabletop dressings, furniture, gifts and much more. I found the perfect fish platter with serving dishes to match for my clambake next month. I will be the hostess with the mostess! Call 204-9199.

I found a sale that was just about over when we got there. At Viliroy & Boch on Main Street in Southampton there is a whale of a clearance sale going on with an additional 20% off. If you missed the 20% off clearance, don't worry, there is such a deal on this sale, you will go back for more. Great china, glasses, silverware, vases, gift items, you name it, they have it. Don't miss out on this one.

At Edward Archer on Main Street, Southampton, don't miss out on early selections of fine men's clothing and furnishings. Valentini, Gran Sasso, Ike Behar, Bruno Magli, Briondi are only some of the designer clothing that will be on their shelves.

If the kids get bored, stop in at Judith Anne's on Jobs Lane for some fun games, books and toys. They will be glad you did, you will too.

While you're out shopping stop in at Storytime on Hampton Road for some more kid's fun stuff like toys, books, games, workbooks, art supplies and educational books and toys... There is also a "Storytime for Toddler's" session on Wednesday's at 11 a.m.

Have you been to Aesthetics Home Furnishings & Antiques at the Citerella Plaza, Montauk Highway in Water Mill yet? Well, if you haven't, you sure are missing out on great inspirations. Aesthetics is filled to the rafters with a new shipment and ready for you to pick and choose. Check out the new shipment of Shanxi tables, mercury glass, chairs, tables, bed, prints and lot's of antique Mediterranean urns, sofas, sleepers, armoires, console/coffee and dining tables, lighting, country pine antique furnishings, lamps, lighting, and much more. Stop in and tell Richard, I sent you.

If you're looking for a real sale, check out Sofa Expressions in the Bridgehampton Commons. It's a "Closing Sale" and everything must go this week. So head on over there and check out the sofas, chairs, armoires and other furniture, wall prints and gifts...

On our way to East Hampton, we spotted a Furniture Warehouse sale going on at 370 Montauk Highway in Wainscott. A quick stop, and we found ourselves amongst a huge selection of all new and slightly used furniture at 50% to 75% off. Wow! You can furnish an entire house here," my sister screamed. There were pictures, lamps from $19, cocktail tables from $99, nightstands and tables from $9, dressers from $350, chairs from $99, sofas from $299, and sofa beds from $399. Open weekends.

One thing for sure, we had to stop in at Khanh Sports on Park Place in East Hampton for a look at his men's, women's and kid's ware, along with a large selection of sunglasses, surf boards, jewelry, bathing suits and accessories, bicycles, skateboards and the ever popular town and country Hawaii shirts, not to mention over 1,000 sun dresses. My sister Paula came out with an armful of summer fun outfits...

At Shoe-Inn East on Main Street, East Hampton and Westhampton Beach, besides the terrific selection of shoes, sandals, bags and more, you can meet the designers in person. I'll bet you would love to meet Steve Madden on June 24. I know I will, see you there.

If you're in East Hampton on Main Street on June 4, from noon to five p.m., you definitely should stop in at Georgina for a "Cocktail Party Trunk Show" that will be previewing the Michael Kors collection. This store is decorated to the nines and has everything you need for dress and casual wear in the Hamptons.

On Main Street at Mark, Fore & Strike you must see their easy-fitting knit swing dress that leaves you in style and comfort in three great colors, pink, sky blue and black that is regularly $59 sale prices this week only for $39. What a nice selection of sweaters, skirts, slacks, shorts, shoes, slippers, polo shirts, khaki's, wind shirts, cards, gifts, souvenirs, sunglasses, even reading glasses and much more!

Also on Main Street, East Hampton at Home James there is 30% off their towel sale...Time to stock up for summer guests and more.

I found a brand new shop on Main Street in Amagansett called, The Crazy Monkey, (love the name). Supporting Artisans from different countries, this shop also trades with local wholesalers and businesses. We found wonderful clothing, jewelry, items for the home and bath and more.

On our way home we went to Sag Harbor my mom's favorite town, to get a bite to eat. Of course, we had to stop at Fishers Home Furnishings first to check out the new shipment that just arrived. My mom was looking for a certain Bombay piece and she found one, hand painted, I may add. Located on Main Street in Sag Harbor, take a look at their new shipment of furniture, upholstery, antiques and plenty of accessories.

Right across the street, we all looked at each other and said, "Serafina?" Well, what do you think? One of my favorites, we had dinner, lots of talk about what we shopped for and a great day was coming to an end. Can't wait till next time.

By the way, I want to thank my readers for all the great e-mail that I have been getting. If you want to e-mail me with any questions about shopping, please do so at shoptil@hamptons.com.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

Q. I have a friend who collects one of a kind, unique ceramics from around the world. I am not able to travel, but would like to give her something special for her birthday to add to her collection from a local artist. Any ideas? – KN-Quogue

A. Sure do! The Marie Winn Studio in Sag Harbor has breathtaking beautiful and unique ceramics, including plates, bowls, vases, oil lamps, coffee and tea pots, mugs, just to name a few. This Season's Essential: The Spring Dress

Knee length or ankle grazing, solid or printed, one thing is certain: this spring, it's all about the dress.

Here's a rundown of this season's hottest dress styles and silhouettes from the fashion experts at American Eagle Outfitters:

• For a soft, feminine look, try a floral print, watercolor dress in leaf or aqua. With thin spaghetti straps, a full lining, and scalloped hem, it looks great when paired with a cap-sleeve cardigan.

• "Hippie chic" dresses are hot this spring. AE's long, bohemian dress in aqua or maize embodies this retro-inspired style and is made of sandwashed cotton for extra softness.

• Add a bit of spice to your spring wardrobe with a Moroccan print dress in deep hues of mulberry or chili. Details include a keyhole back with a wooden bead enclosure, spaghetti straps, and an empire waist.

• Bold and bright, the Texas rose dress in chili or tortilla is a vibrant item for spring. With an embroidered rose and crochet hem, it is relaxed yet feminine, the piece to pack for a weekend getaway.

• The pastel purple Samba dress will take you from day to evening. Pair it with a fitted cardigan in soft white for day; reveal its delicate beading and spaghetti straps at night.

• A paisley print georgette dress in pomegranate or leaf is light, breezy...perfect for a special spring occasion.

• Crisp and clean, a classic khaki dress in canvas cotton is as versatile as it is comfortable. Wear solo or layer bright tank tops underneath for a dash of color.

• Down with denim? The denim Baja dress with pink stitching at the neckline and the X-treme denim dress with criss-cross spaghetti straps are great to lounge around in on the weekends. Pair with sandals for evening; sneakers for a more relaxed look.

ART COMMENTARY

MARGARET KERR'S GARDEN AS ART

Each spring, the Garden Conservancy sponsors tours of special private gardens throughout the United States. One such place is located at the home of artists Margaret Kerr and Robert Richenburg. Their Springs domain, overlooking Acabonac Harbor, provides a haven for the couple's creative ventures as it also serves as a setting for Ms. Kerr's flowerbeds, herbary, brick paths and lily pond. In a word, a kind of site-specific art installation that is both unique and personal.

Unique because we don't often consider a garden as an installation and personal because of Ms. Kerr's aesthetic gifts which she brings to bear on all her endeavors.

The site is divided into distinct parts, all segments blending together in a spontaneous – looking harmony, even when we know Ms. Kerr has planned somethings down to the utmost detail (ie. blooming of flowers at various times during the spring/summer) – or even where we know her "rugs" (geometric patterns made of brick that are "scattered" around the site) are methodically designed.

Drifts of yellow daffodils initially greet the viewer's eye serving as a good example of this spontaneous, yet planned, quality. A Medieval herb garden, complete with Lily pond and plants bearing such evocative names like forget-me-nots and cowslips, conjures up a past time that is irresistable. Yet, there's the sculptured pear tree which braces a wall, adding a calculated touch existing alongside an uninhibited, meditative ambience.

Fragment of a Brick

Ms. Kerr's garden installation is expanded to include her studio where she creates brick rugs and currently other pieces made of brick dust We can't help but also include her husband's works as well, which infuse the couples' home with a spirited love- of- life.

Curiously, Mr. Richenburg (an artist who established himself early on, working in the Abstract Expressionism tradition) gravitates toward a similar spontaneous/controlled style, his geometric paintings coexisting with his current wire sculpture pieces. Like his wife's garden, there's both a meditative and energetic feeling aroused by his endeavors. Another similarity is somewhat more obvious: a white hanging composed of shingle-like shapes recalling Ms. Kerr's brick "rugs."

A keen observer can't leave the couple's home without one last thought about the garden as an installation: it's special because most installations have physical objects we can see/hear. Ms. Kerr herself is just as essential as any of her actual objects – not only as an artist, but also as a human being.

Ms. Kerr's garden will be open on June 17 from 10-4pm. Call the Garden Conservancy at 914-215-5384 for information. Her works are also currently at East Hampton's Arlene Bujese Gallery.

HONORING THE ARTIST: MICHAEL PEREZ

From the hills of Hollywood to the dunes of Southampton beaches, New York artist Michael Perez has made a colorful splash in the art world. His paintings can be found in the homes of well-known private collectors, on TV show sets, and in the movies. Offices and restaurants across the country are adorned with Perez's work. And his artwork graces the walls of Perez's own Apple Art Gallery at 49 Jobs Lane in Southampton.

"Opening this gallery was a dream of mine," said Perez, whose work was recently featured on the set of Friends. "And meeting my clientele has made the experience most fulfilling. I have found a home in, and inspiration from, the Hamptons."

Celebrating his third season in the Hamptons, Perez's official opening is June 17. The show, "Hollywood Faces 2000: Beyond My Control," will feature Perez's latest collection, including abstract faces and wildly surreal flowers.

Perez's art, overflowing with bold colors and expression, evokes a sense of freedom and joy. "I paint freely and uninhibitedly, using strong colors that both complement and clash. I use color and thick black lines to challenge the conventional," said the artist.

Perez is far from conventional. With tremendous determination, Perez sold his paintings on the streets of New York City for many years before opening up the gallery in the summer of 1998. One year later, his work was selected by members of Hollywood's top art departments to be featured on several TV shows, including Sabrina the Teenage Witch, Suddenly Susan and Melrose Place. Two pieces, entitled "Goddesses" and "Magenta Lady," are featured in the upcoming Robert DeNiro film 15 Minutes. Perez was also named the Artist of the Year by the Long Island Arts Association at a recent benefit event.

Michael Perez

His main influences include Pop Artist Andy Warhol and Abstract Visionary Pablo Picasso.

"People are free in the Hamptons," explains Perez. "They are away from all the hustle and bustle, playing and enjoying life." This Hampton spirit is one source of inspiration and is reflected in Perez's work.

Take Five 2000
with Jan Silver

If you are recovering from the Memorial Day weekend onslaught, we have a quiet weekend of literary talks, some theater and good jazz. Bay Street Theatre in Sag Harbor continues its run of the hit London chiller The Woman in Black, and well-known drummer Chico Hamilton opens the "Jazz at the Wild Rose" Sunday night series in Bridgehampton.

This is also a busy weekend of fundraisers for local organizations. Activities start early Friday evening with the combined Nature Conservancy/Group for the South Fork "Environmental Benefit 2000" at the Elaine Benson Gallery. The Decorators/Designers/Dealers Sale and Auction to benefit the Southampton Fresh Air Home opens on Saturday with a cocktail party. Small Time Crooks Up at the Villa

WOODY, THE HONEYMOONERS IS OVER

Television?? Hey neighbor... don't get me started! Classic television is over..replaced by what the big screen called B Movies, (A Movies were big time). Conversely, on the big screen, the B Movie is now your basic TV Movie. Confusing? Well, Woody Allen's new small time movie, Small Time Crooks, will delight and charm you right out of caring about TV, or not TV... that is the question. This small and genial movie, as usual with Woody, uses well-known "Springboards" to take those over-board leaps of fancy of his that keep the films bobbing riskily between deep and shallow waters.

Television? Woody and co-star Tracy Ullman are open tributes, as written by Woody, to the Kramdens of The Honeymooners, right up to Woody's last line (as Ray) to Tracy(as Frenchy),"Honey, you're the greatest!" Woody also pays tribute to Big Deal on Madonna Street, the 1958 Italian film classic, heist/comedy, as Ray, one of the smallest, of small time crooks, plans to rent a store, with a band of equally bungling crooks, and tunnel into a nearby bank, Frenchy, a one-time stripper, now a full-time manicurist, and as a good wifey... small time cook and baker. So, she has to put up the seed money and bake cookies in the store as a front. Her cookie shop is a tremendous success and with the help of her dim, dumb, sweet cousin May... yet! May, played so vacantly nice by Elaine May, also helps, naively, put Ray out of business along with his ditzy gang. All too soon, they are big time moneymakers in Frenchy's Cookies franchise stores.

RAGS TO RITZY CRACKERS WITH CAVIAR

Incredibly wealthy, Frenchy and Ray have everything and it's not enough for Frenchy who now wants cultchah and class... but, it's too much for Ray. Now, Woody brings in the good looking young man with the culture and the smarts to spare, from the 1958 film Born Yesterday to teach her a thing or two. Ullman isn't Judy Holiday's Oscar Award "dumb blond" because you can't see the innocence under the gaucherie but, Hugh Grant as the Pygmalion-would-be-lover /teacher, sets a standard for high-toned caddishness with a lispy over-bite.

CAFE LATTE WITH MUSSOLINI AND BANCROFT AND PENN AND A CORPSE

Macaroni is served up only once in Up At The Villa. Then it is as a Florentine substitute for pathetic entertainment at a huge dinner party thrown by Anne Bancroft(doing Somerset Maugham Brit-nattering), for dozens of elderly British twits.

Small Time Crooks, Up At The Villa, Page 2 in very 1930's outfits, blattering lines you'd swear you heard before from better actors in similar films..don't forget the British fascists with the black shirts and black dispositions.

In some of the same 1930's Tuxedos, Sean Penn is an adventurer who looks like a Hollywood leading man. He is fine. He saves Kristen Scott Thomas and the movie from a fate worse than the death of a scrawny refugee who played a violin so badly, Ms. Bancroft had to resort to macaroni and later he was taken to a conjugal bed by Miss Scott Thomas. He had to pay! Well, there is Firenze statuary, villas and that Yankee Doodle Dandy, Penn. Who called it Macaroni?

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer, writer and director of award-winning films for ABC, NBC, PBS and European feature films. He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey who co-hosts with him the "Dan's Papers "They Made the Film Here" Film Festival.

HAMPTON NIGHTLIFE WITH CHRISTINE CARROLL

The Hamptons club scene has officially begun and the summer of 2000 looks like it's going to be a blast. Visitors came from all over to boogie down, unfortunately, a lot of boogying had to be done on line waiting to get into wherever it was you wanted to go. My friends waited for three hours on line at CPI on Saturday, however they all agreed it was totally worth it.

Jet East was pretty crowded for their opening night on Friday. Samantha Cole and Duncan Sheik were among the partygoers. NV had a nice private champagne party on Saturday before opening the doors to the public. Sunday was fun at Conscience Point where onelevel.com has a bash with Q-Tip as the DJ. CPI was packed on Sunday also with Amnesia, a night of hard core house music. Eminem did show up at Life to please the very excited crowd. The Boardy Barn was even open on Monday, hope there was enough laundry detergent to go around.

See you all out next weekend. Maybe the lines will be short and the wait for a taxi not so long.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

We lived in a house in Brooklyn, with a coal stove in the basement. Now that the season to grill is upon us, I am reminded of the succulent rib lamb chops that my mother would pack into a hinged grill and send me down to that coal stove to cook.

Olive oil, chopped garlic and lemon juice are the three simple ingredients that mom dressed the chops with. It was my first lesson in grilling. As one of five kids, I took the job seriously and would never relinquish it to my siblings. Perhaps this was the clue to my calling? The smoky, flavorful aromas rising from the fat dripping into the coals thrill me now as it did then.

I don't remember what mom served with the chops. No doubt some vegetable and potato accompaniment. Today I would love a warm, creamy eggplant and leek caviar, flavored with garlic, parsley and a fruity olive oil. For color and contrasting texture, serve a shredded (almost) raw beet salad with shallots in a sherry vinegar dressing on a bed of arugula.

Pick out the sweetest melon you can find for a light dessert ending to a perfectly delightful dinner.

GRILLED LAMB CHOPS, GREEK STYLE

For deliciously succulent rib chops marinate them with a bit of lemon juice and oregano. The chops can also be cooked in a ridged grill pan on top of the stove.
Serves 4

Juice of 1 lemon
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
12 rib lamb chops with 3-4 inches of bone, trimmed of excess fat
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
Lemon wedges for garnish (optional)

1. Whisk the lemon juice, oregano, garlic and oil in a large glass or earthenware bowl, large enough to hold the chops. Add the chops to the marinade and spoon over the dressing to coat evenly. Marinate for 1 hour at room temperature or up to 2 hours, refrigerated. Bring to room temperature before cooking.

2. Preheat a grill until coals are ashen hot. Shake off excess marinade from chops and grill for about 4 minutes on each side for medium rare. (Lamb should be pink for best flavor.) Baste the chops with a little of the marinade from time to time. If flare-ups occur, spray cold water on the coals. Chops are perfectly done when the meat is springy to the touch. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

3. Transfer to a warm platter and serve with lemon wedges, if desired.

EGGPLANT AND LEEK CAVIAR

Eggplant caviar is simply a creamy mix of pureed eggplant infused with garlic, onions and olive oil to serve on bread toasts as an appetizer. Add tender, but slightly crunchy, leek and serve warm to accompany the grilled chops.
Serves 4

1 medium eggplant, about 1 pound, peeled and cubed
1 large leek, trimmed, well washed and thinly sliced
2 cloves garlic, minced
2-3 tablespoons finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
2 teaspoons lemon juice
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Steam the eggplant over simmering water for 10-12 minutes until tender. Transfer to a mixing bowl and mash with a fork or potato masher. Steam leek separately over simmering water for 10-12 minutes until tender. Add to the eggplant and stir to mix.

2. Season with remaining ingredients. Stir to mix and taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. Can be prepared up to several hours ahead and warmed in a double boiler before serving.

SHREDDED BEET SALAD WITH ARUGULA

For this salad I bake the beets for a shorter time than usual to achieve an almost raw texture. Working with beets, as you know can be messy, so work with them near your kitchen sink and be sure to wear an apron.
Serves 4

For the salad
1 bunch beets. Scrubbed and trimmed
1 bunch arugula, washed and spin-dried

For the vinaigrette
2 shallots, finely chopped
1 tablespoon grainy Dijon mustard
2 tablespoons sherry vinegar
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons chopped dill or parsley

Preheat oven to 400 degrees

1. Wrap the beets securely in heavy foil and put on a cookie sheet. Bake in preheated oven for 30-40 minutes. When cool enough to handle, peel with a vegetable peeler and cut in half, as necessary. Fit beets in the feed tube of a food processor with the shredding blade in place, or grate whole on a four-sided hand grater. Can be prepared ahead, refrigerated in a suitable container. Wash and spin dry the arugula leaves, wrap in paper towels and refrigerate if doing ahead.

2. Put the shallots, mustard and vinegar in a small bowl and stir to mix. Gradually whisk in olive oil and season to taste with salt and pepper. Add dressing to the shredded beets and toss to coat. Arrange beets on a bed of arugula, sprinkle with dill or parsley and serve.

He spent Memorial Day weekend in the kitchen of 95 School Street in Bridgehampton helping out the team of Bill Bonbrest and executive chef Andrew Engle get through the busy weekend. Understanding New FDA Labeling

If you're one of the millions of Americans who take dietary supplements, you'll be pleased to learn that new FDA regulations require labels to state what condition the product can help treat-information that can prove valuable if you know how to interpret it.

Before the new rules, the FDA considered many common conditions, such as headache and pregnancy as diseases. Since dietary supplements may not claim to prevent or treat disease, the product labels could not state exactly how to use the product until now. The FDA has relaxed its definition of disease and labels can now claim to treat common conditions like PMS, stress and edema.

Many consumer advocates believe the revised ruling on labeling will help health-conscious consumers choose the most appropriate and beneficial natural health treatments for their specific medical conditions. One health and wellness Internet company agrees, but is offering guidance as the information on labels is still complex.

Healthshop.com, a leading Web site for natural health solutions, including personalized programs, information, community and products is trying to help. The company has issued a series of guidelines and helpful information on their Web site to help consumers cut through the clutter of complicated FDA terms and explain the information simply.

According to Sue Frederick, healthshop.com's editor-in-chief, some of the most common labeling terms are:

• Structure/function claims vs. disease: These are statements that describe how a vitamin, mineral, herb or dietary supplement supports human health and treats common conditions such as headache, heartburn and indigestion.

• The Disclaimer: Dietary supplements must state that the product is not a drug and receives no FDA pre-market approval.

• "High Potency" and "Antioxidant:" Describe either the overall dietary supplement formula or ingredients in the formula. High potency can only describe nutrients in a dietary supplement formula or ingredients in the formula.

Antioxidant may only be used to describe a nutrient that as been scientifically proven to inactivate free radicals (unbalanced molecules that can damage healthy cells) or prevent chemical reactions to the body caused by free radicals.

Healthshop.com is the only natural health site to offer a 10-Step Quality Assurance Program to ensure that the products they sell are safe and all natural. To learn more about healthshop.com's commitment to providing consumers with the information needed to make informed health decisions, please contact 'Sue Frederick, editor-in-chief healthshop.com at labeling@healthshop.com.

Be Health Smart: Avoid Foodborne Illness

To help make your household a healthier environment, it is important to thoroughly clean places in your kitchen that can harbor potentially dangerous germs. These tips from the Georgia-Pacific Health Smart Institute can help:

• More than one billion germs can potentially grow in a sponge after just one day's use, so use paper towels whenever possible.

• Use paper towels to clean kitchen surfaces, including refrigerator door handles and light switches. Drying cutting boards with paper towels such as Coronet® and Sparkle® can help remove germs missed during the washing process.

• Clean and disinfect counters often. Wipe dry with paper towels to minimize rate at which bacteria multiply.

• Use paper towels or napkins to help clean fruits and vegetables. Laboratory tests show that rinsing an apple with water removes approximately 75 percent of contaminating germs, whereas rinsing and drying with a paper product can remove up to 99 percent of the germs-that's significantly more germs than rinsing alone.

For more information on foodborne illness and other Health Smart™ topics please call 1-877-GPCLEAN, visit the Web site at www.gphealthsmart.com or write to Georgia-Pacific Health Smart Institute, P.O. Box 2411, Palatka, FL 32178-2411.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

I came across an interesting piece of trivia in the American Farm Bureau News this week according to the Tax Foundation, Americans will spend two hours and forty-two minutes of each eight hour day working to pay taxes. Most of this time – one hour and fifty-two minutes – will be spent to pay federal taxes. The rest fifty minutes, will be spent working to pay state and local taxes.

I'm sure you all are aware of the recent interest rate hike. This hike represents yet another bombshell for farmers who are already struggling due to skyrocketing fuel prices and plummeting commodity prices. Thanks to the hike, many banks have increased their prime rate to 9.5 percent. What this, in effect, will do is push farmers operating loans to over ten percent, a high point farmers have not seen since the early '90s. Many of them borrow for operating and intermediary loans at rates of to one percentage point higher than the prime rate. Some are even as high as one-and-a-half points above prime.

If all such loans were to be increased by just one percent, American farmers would be paying an additional $800 million in interest expense. Imagine a farmer who needs $300,000 to buy land or refinance an existing land loan. He or she would end up paying $3,000 extra PER YEAR!

I'm sure you all can relate to having to deal with the ridiculous fuel cost increases over the last year. Well, that affects production costs for farmers, and as price takers (as compared to price makers) that has a serious effect on their profit. Interest rate hikes are only going to add to the stress and difficulty of putting out a quality product and making a reasonable profit.

Although the Federal Reserve's decision may be targeted at the general economy, the agricultural community is getting caught in the crossfire when it can least afford another hit.

Another important but controversial issue that affects various sectors in different ways is Permanent Normal Trade Relations (PNTR) for China. Over 260 representatives from a variety of agricultural organizations traveled to Washington, DC, last week to impress on the importance of opening China's increasing market to US producers. Representatives from the National Cattlemen's Beef Assn., National Corn Grower's Assn., National Pork Producer's Council, US Wheat Assn., American Seed Trade Assn., American Soybean Assn., and the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives all sent representatives to be heard in support the PNTR.

According to American Farm Bureau President Bob Stallman, "China has offered American agriculture a historic opportunity that could greatly enhance our export potential at a time when it is drastically needed. It can positively impact farm income in the U.S. when the agreement goes into effect."

This brings us once again right down to what I always say the best way to preserve farmland is to help ensure that farmers make enough of a profit to stay in business. While we do strongly support the concept of free trade, there is a difference between free trade and fair trade – everyone competing on equal footing. With an added consumer base of China, farmers will be able to increase profitability and not "give up the ship." By staying in business, farmers will ensure that Americans will not become dependent upon other countries for our food, as we are now for fuel.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

Although they are forgiving plants and will grow in sun, rhododendrons prefer partial shade. This is especially important during the hottest part of the day when their leaves can easily burn. A woodland setting is ideal, but trees, houses, or other structures can also provide protection from the harsh afternoon sun.

Rhododendrons are acid loving plants. A pH of 5.6 is ideal, so take a soil test before planting. If your soil is too alkaline, add some peat moss or elemental sulfur (5) to the planting hole. The soil testing lab will tell you what is required. For soil testing; Spring Meadow Organic Farming and Gardening Research Center, 516-725-5725.

Since soggy, wet roots account for the most common and most serious rhododendron problems, root rot, stem dieback, and fungi, providing good drainage is the most important step you can take to ensure the long term health of your plants.

When planting, disregard the old rule for planting shrubs that calls for digging a hole at least twice as deep as the root ball. Instead, dig a shallow hole twice as wide as the root ball. A six foot plant could have a four foot wide root ball. Growing in pure bark, its root mass will be twice as wide as it would be if it had been grown in heavy soil. A healthy root ball is generally about three times wider than it is deep.

Deep holes in heavy soil tend to create a bucket effect holding water at the root level. Wide, shallow holes encourage excess water to seep outward, away from roots. The depth of your hole will be determined by your soil-type, but in general, rhododoendrons prefer shallow planting.

If you have a sandy soil with good drainage, dig a hole the depth of the root ball and plant your rhododoendron at the same depth it grew in the container. For heavy, clay based soil, dig a shallower hole. You can place the top of the root ball as much as several inches above ground, mounding the planting medium from the edge of the hole up and over the top of the root ball.

To facilitate drainage and moisture retention, planting holes should be filled with roughly one part garden soil and two parts humus. For the humus, we like mixing equal parts of coarse and fine materials. A coarse material like bark chips creates a space for air and promotes drainage, while a fine material like compost retains moisture and nutrients.

Although rhododendrons don't like soggy soil, they do need plenty of water. This is especially important 'for recently planted rhododendrons, because their roots are slow to grow out into the surrounding soil. Try watering more often, but not as deeply. Drip irrigation is ideal because it provides just the right amount of water that can be taken up by the roots.

Also, keep in mind that rhododododendron root balls are very dense. Once they dry out, they are difficult to rewet; in fact, they are even capable of shedding water. If you suspect that the roots are not absorbing water, often evidenced by leaf wilt or curl, or flowers that droop, drop immediately, or don't open at all, try gouging a small hole into the center of the root mass to direct water to the roots. On occasion, we've dug up a dried out plant that is still of manageable size and soaked the entire root ball overnight in a container of water, with a mix of fish/seaweed.

Mulching helps prevent rhododendron roots from drying out; keeps plants cool in summer; protects roots from sudden shifts in winter soil temperature; and prevents weeds from competing for moisture. In their natural environment, these shrubs provide their own leaves as mulch and take advantage of the leaves of surrounding trees. In our garden, we mulch with the same coarse bark that we use when planting because it allows air and water to reach the roots. We never use black plastic, and fine peat moss will tend to dry out and shed water like a thatched roof.

Note: Never pile mulch up on the stem because it might rot. Arrange it away from the trunk, creating a ring on top of the periphery of the root ball that will catch the water and direct it to the roots of the plant.

In areas where the ground does not freeze, rhododendrons take up and store food during the winter months. Therefore, organic fertilizer can be applied in January, after the plants go dormant, again in March, and a final feeding in June. Avoid applying fertilizer in the fall; this can delay dormancy and cause the plants to be less cold hardy in the first freezes. For established plants, which need less fertilizer, and for those grown in very cold areas, fertilize once in early spring and again in June. Select an organic fertilizer prepared for acidloving plants. Rhododendrons need an extra dose of nitrogen (N) to grow and bud well. We prefer a organic formula that is higher in (N) and use a 8-6-4, that releases nitrogen (N) over a long period.

Deadheading and pinching keep these ornamentals compact and in good shape. We deadhead to speed the plant into flower production for the coming year and to make the plant look tidier.

After deadheading, the plant sends up growth buds where the bloom was. On the part of the shrub that did not bloom, there is usually only a single growth bud, which we pinch out. After the single bud has been removed the plant immediately produces multiple growth buds there. These result in additional branches and a bushier plant. It is possible to prune rhododendrons if they get too big for your site. But if you cut back heavily, you won't have flowers for a year or two because they flower on the previous year's growth.

Good grooming also includes removing weak interior limbs and any crossed or ground-touching branches. Each year, after flowering, when large-leaved rhododendrons send out new growth, there is a visible point where this growth starts. This is the growth joint, where dormant growth buds are located. Pruning should be done just above a growth joint for optimum rebound. The plant will take severe pruning, though, and reward you with good growth and luxuriant foliage.

Winning The Battle Against Hay Fever

Half of all Americans live in a household with at least one person who has allergies. And each spring, as pollen counts rise, the sound of sniffles and sneezes spreads across the nation.

But allergies are no laughing matter. That runny nose and stuffy head are often accompanied by headaches, eye irritation, and fatigue. These symptoms can cut into worker productivity-not to mention, make life miserable.

"With the rise in people affected by allergies, there is a greater need for products to help people breathe better," said Soon-Chart Yu, founder and CEO of gazoontite.com, which offers products and information to help people with allergies and asthma.

Drawing from his own experience with allergies, Yu created a Web site, retail stores, and catalog to educate people on ways they can protect themselves from allergens like pollen.

Many people rely solely on medications to help them manage their allergies. Few realize that they can also take some simple steps to improve the quality of the air they breathe. In fact, gazoontite.com specializes in products that help people reduce their exposure to the whole world of things that make them sneeze.

Some tips for steering clear of pollen this spring:

• Invest in an air purifier with a HEPA (High Efficiency Particulate Air) filter, and put it in your bedroom so you breathe cleaner air while you sleep. HEPA filters remove 99.97 percent of all airborne particles down to 0.3 microns, including pollen. (A human hair is about 50 microns wide.)

• Replace the old filters in your furnace/AC unit with new high-efficiency filters. And change your filters regularly. An old, dirty filter can actually worsen your indoor air quality.

• Dust and clean regularly with cleaning tools that collect dust and pollen, rather than send them back into circulation. Tools you can use include special dust cloths that attract dust, and vacuum cleaners equipped with HEPA filters and sealed bags. Tip: Give special attention to windowsills where pollen collects.

• Some simple behavior modifications can make a big difference in your pollen exposure. Since pollen levels are usually highest between 5 and 10 am, try to avoid being outdoors then. (Try a workout in the gym rather than a jog in the park.) Don't hang laundry outdoors during pollen season-it's a great way for pollen grains to hitch a ride indoors. And wash that pollen out of your hair before you go to sleep.

As you sneeze and wheeze your way through spring, keep in mind that you may not have hay fever, after all. Plenty of people are allergic to dust mites or mold, two common allergens that don't always get the attention that pollen does. As with many medical conditions, the key to managing your allergies is education. Figure out what you're allergic to, before you look for helpful products or change your behavior.

Responding to the need for reliable information on the Internet, gazoontite.com has a nurse on staff who answers questions online from 9 am to 12 noon (PST) Monday though Friday.

For more tips on controlling your allergies this spring, log on to www.gazoontite.com or call 1-888-4MY-NOSE.

Prescription Drugs: What You Should Know

Q. Why are drugs so expensive?

A. These drugs are costly in part because they require years of research and development. But there is a large price disparity between what seniors are charged and the prices for drug manufacturers' most favored customers such as the federal government and private insurers. Drug manufacturers offer their favored customers large discounts on expensive drugs in return for promised business. Drug manufacturers compensate by charging individual seniors more. This "cost shifting" places the burden of profit on those who can least afford it.

Q. Why can't Medicare beneficiaries pay for the prescription drugs they need?

A. One in eight seniors cannot afford the cost of prescription drugs. Those individuals not only put their health at risk, but ultimately cost the Medicare system more in funds through treatments and hospitalizations which might have been avoided by proper medication. To get well and remain healthy longer, seniors must be able to afford the drugs they need.

Q. What is the federal government doing to improve this serious situation?

A. When Congress returns this fall, it will consider various proposals to modernize Medicare. One such proposal, put forward earlier this year by Sen. John Breaux (D-LA) and Rep. Bill Thomas (R-CA), would end the universal eligibility to a defined set of benefits and require beneficiaries to pick among competing health plans. The government would use Medicare trust funds to pay for a portion of the premiums, but additional costs would be born by the beneficiary. Prescription drugs would not be included in the basic benefit package under the Breaux-Thomas proposal, but all private Medigap plans would be required to offer prescription drug coverage. Individuals with a monthly income less than $947 and couples with a monthly income less than $1265 would not have to pay any premium to receive coverage through Medigap.

Q. Does the Administration have a prescription drug proposal?

A. Yes, the program would be voluntary and permit beneficiaries to purchase coverage for half of their out-of-pocket prescription drug costs, up to $5,000/year. When fully phased-in, the pharmaceutical benefit, which would be supplementary insurance like Part B, would cost about $44/month. Low-income beneficiaries with incomes less than 150 percent of poverty would be subsidized and employers providing drug coverage to retirees would be partially reimbursed. There are other proposals in Congress that would make prescription drugs more affordable, including one by Senator Ted Kennedy (D-MA) and Rep. Pete Stark (D-CA) that would expand Medicare to include coverage of catastrophic drug costs.

Q. What can I do if I think that drug coverage for seniors is important?

A. Let members of Congress know that prescription drug coverage is a serious concern for you. Contact your two Senators and your House Representative to include prescription drug coverage for seniors that is universal, fair and affordable. Members of Congress can be reached by calling the Capitol operator at (202) 224-3121 and asking for them by name.

If you need more information on this or any other senior issues, call the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare at (800) 966-1935.

Mary Jane Yarrington is a recognized expert in the field of Social Security and Medicare policy. She has been involved in Social Security issues for more than 40 years as a congressional caseworker and a senior policy analyst for the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, the nation's second-largest seniors group.

A Journey To The Far East

East End Acupuncturist, Sondra Winenga, has just returned from the Far East. An opportunity to attend the International Congress on Traditional Medicine (Beijing 2000) brought her to China in April and May. Thirty countries were represented from all over the world, and gathered at the Congress for an academic exchange of the highest caliber regarding acupuncture, herbs, and research. Ms. Winenga reports that attending a welcoming banquet hosted by Beijing Government Officials for a thousand colleagues and scholars at the Great Hall of the People proved just how far Traditional Chinese Medicine has come to be embraced internationally. "It was exhilarating to actually feel part of the global village – that was a first for me. For a thousand people to be diversified and unified through our interest in acupuncture was a phenomenal experience," Sondra proclaims.

Her journey included Hospital training at Traditional Medicine Hospitals in both Xian and Shanghai. "Their techniques are certainly stronger than the way most acupuncturists practice here in the States," Ms. Winenga noted. "Here, we are far more concerned with patient comfort. Acupuncture doesn't have to hurt to be effective."

Cultural highlights of the trip included climbing the Great Wall and visiting Tiananmen Square, Ming Tomb, Summer Palace, several Buddhist temples, Yuyuan Garden, and Eastern Bright Pearl Tower.

"As an acupuncturist, it was important for me to make the pilgrimage to China, where it all began," Sondra explains, "I saw everything from poverty, modernization, rapid changes, academic exchange, fellowship between nations, gorgeous architecture and teaming crowds. Having been to China makes me see the Hamptons in a new light, indeed, we are blessed with prosperity, natural beauty all around us, and even ample space. We are more fortunate than we realize," Sondra Winenga reflected. All in all, a very successful pilgrimage to China.

Sondra Winenga, Acupuncturist is available to assist you with your health concerns by appointment. Call 631-329-9898.

Use Room Dividers To Conquer Your Space Problems

Telecommuting, home delivery, home offices, home entertainment... all these new lifestyles are putting more pressure on your available space.. Before you drop big bucks on home remodeling or expansion, consider installing room dividers.

"Room dividers offer a unique solution to conflicting demands on space," says Richard Roll, president of American Homeowners Association (AHA). "With a divider, you can separate rooms and reduce conflicts, noise, and clutter. They're both practical and pleasing – and they can be installed easily and quickly with basic tools."

Dividers are available now in many styles and materials. Panelized dividers are practical and easy to customize.

Decorative panels may consist of squares of wood framing covered with finished plywood, glass or other materials in vertical supports. Place glass or wood panels according to your whim, glass allows light while wood provides more privacy. Or leave the panel off and create a cubicle for storage or shelving space.

In order to provide a secure, stable fit, wall modules are anchored at top and bottom by adjustable pads that apply pressure to the ceiling and floor. You can easily provide power for appliances, computers and electronics by stringing extension cords through the divider or installing conduits.

If you want to go traditional, choose a solid-looking divider made from wood cabinetry. You can add tons of storage and shelving space this way.

See through glass cabinets provides more light and display space for your china, photographs or other heirlooms. Of course, this solution is less pre-fab and more labor intensive than a panelized divider.

Another solution is to get twin French doors that fit the dimensions of your "wannabe" wall, and to install vertical posts and framing around the doors.

The minimal approach is to purchase stand-alone, folding screens. These panels can be fixed and taken away when the wall is not needed.

POLICE BLOTTER

In Montauk, a tire slasher struck again, although this time it was not police vehicles that were the target. A 1994 Ford pickup and a 1986 Dodge van were the victims this time. The tires will cost $450 and $200 respectively.

A shoplifter was confronted by store security guards in front of the Bridgehampton Kmart with over $350 worth of clothes under his arms. When the security guards attempted to stop the apparel absconder, he dropped the clothes and ran. Police have a description.

When Edward Gentile of Noyac attempted to collect money due him for work performed, his alleged debtor attacked him both verbally, and then with a tire iron. Gentile was struck on the shoulders and leg with said tire iron. No arrests have been made.

A thirty year-old Southampton woman was followed around the Bridgehampton Commons by a man in a dump truck honking his horn, yelling and blowing kisses. The woman memorized the license plate and called the police who notified the owner, the driver's wife.

An East Hampton was having her car repaired at the Georgica Getty station, and when she returned, her stereo was stolen, valued at $300. Along with the stereo, 500 CDs were also taken, valued at over $1,800.

A Wainscott man reported the theft of a mountain bike, a black futon, a painting, two electric drills and a black armchair from his Swamp Road garage. The garage and house had been left unlocked, and a sign was in the garage stating, "Free, feel free to take," that the complainant had used earlier in a yard sale.

In Springs, the wily woodsman struck again. This time thirty-three cedars have been cut from a vacant, wooded lot over the past two months. Police have the names of suspects.

* * *

An Amagansett man returned home around 11:30 p.m. to find a window open, his house ransacked, a mirror shattered, holes in the walls and a man sleeping in his bed. East Hampton Town Police came and arrested Nolan Petykowski, 19, with second degree burglary and second degree criminal mischief, both felonies. He was arraigned the following morning and released on his own recognizance.

A Hampton Bays woman reported that a burglar entered her Squires Avenue home through the bedroom window, even though she had left the back door open. The woman's stepdaughter found the open window and sand in the bed. Jewelry valued at $7,400 was reported missing.

Somebody took the VFW donation can for the Disabled Veterans Association from the counter of the Country market on North Sea Road in Southampton. Approximately $40 was in the can.

Dan's LETTERS

WHPAC'S AUCTION
Dear Dan,

On behalf of the Board of Directors and the staff of the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, we offer our most sincere appreciation for your leadership role in the second successful Dan's Papers Silent Art Auction & Benefit at the Center. As you may be aware, the ticket revenue produced by performances at the Center covers only 40% of the cost to operate our magnificent Center. Consequently, fund-raising events such as this play an integral role in supporting the on-going mission of the Theatre.

The dedication and effort demonstrated by your staff and the volunteer committee was outstanding. Their hard work ensured an elegant and entertaining evening celebrating the visual and performing arts for all in attendance. Rose Mancusi will be sending out thanks to each of the generous artists who participated.

Once again, thank you for all you do for us and the entire community and congratulations on this, the 40th year of Dan's Papers!

Mark P Alexander
Executive Director
WHB Perfroming Arts Center

WORSE CURSE
Dear Dan,

You got it right with the article but you got it wrong with Springs Banks to Hands Creek, its Ely Brook to Hands Creek and it' s curse worse than Werewolf. Most people don't think it's a name they think it's directions! Maybe you can use your influence and change it to O"Donoghue Goldberg's Way.

Herman M. Goldberg 58-you guessed it!

YES TO ROSS
Dear Dan,

Yes, very definitely yes, to the Ross School and your stand that it will benefit not just its own students but the entire community. We had never been to the Ross School prior to Saturday and have no linkage to the Ross School. However, the Bouvier film and your article generated enough curiosity to accept Dan's ad. Invitation to view Gray Gardens for us. Both the film and the surroundings were delightful.

Inspired academic/cultural philanthropy reflects America at its very best.

Bruce & Jean Robertson-Dick
Southampton

SAD AND ANGRY
Dear Dan,

When I read your article "This Way Out", I felt compelled to send you a little "shout." Thank you for another article confirming our own thinking. When we saw them putting up these signs on our way back to the big city we did a double take, then we had a few sarcastic laughs, then we felt a little sad and angry at more gross stupidity in this world. SO WHAT ELSE IS NEW.

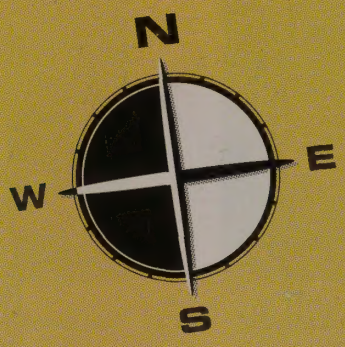
CHANGE & TOBACCO



At the end of 1998, Philip Morris USA, along with other major tobacco companies, reached an unprecedented agreement that fundamentally changed how tobacco is marketed, promoted and advertised in the United States.

Among other things, the agreement imposes numerous restrictions identified by the public health community as measures that are aimed at reducing the use of tobacco products by minors.

The changes brought about by the agreement are consistent with our goal to responsibly market our products to adults who choose to smoke. You've probably noticed some of the more visible changes, like the removal of our tobacco advertising on billboards; but there have also been other significant changes.

That is why we're here, in this space, in this publication: to share with you in the coming months the changes that have taken place and the things Philip Morris USA is doing to address tobacco-related issues.

Our purpose is not to debate, but instead to open a dialogue. For instance, we want to help address the problem of underage smoking and the issue of cigarette smoke in public places.

We believe we have a role to play as society addresses issues, and we'd like to let you know what our company is doing.

One thing is clear: the changes brought about by the Master Settlement Agreement—as well as other initiatives we are undertaking that go beyond the agreement—provide us with an opportunity to move forward and resolve tobacco-related issues.

We believe opening this dialogue will help bring us more in accord with public expectations of a responsible company in a changing world. For more information, visit our Web site at www.philipmorrisusa.com. If you don't have Internet access, please call 1-877-PMUSAWEB.
